P R E F A C E.

THIS volume contains a Calendar of all instruments and entries relating to Ireland found, from 1171 to 1251 inclusive, upon or among the Public Records of England. To the official recommendation of the late Lord Romilly, to whom the public owes so much in regard to Calendars, approved of in 1872 by the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, this Calendar owes its origin. It was commenced in April 1873.

The vast mass of documents now concentrated at the Public Record Office refers in some respects to many countries; but with the single exception of England herself, we find in it more ancient instruments and entries relating to Ireland than to any country. Some of the reasons why this should be are not far to seek:—1st, England having assumed the government of Ireland in 1171, more than seven centuries ago, and subsequently continued it, we might naturally expect to find among the muniments of England many records relating to that government; 2ndly, royal grants affecting Ireland when passed under the Great Seal of England would, we apprehend after the practice, so to speak, of Records became settled, be generally enrolled, like grants affecting the latter country, on the English Patent or Charter Rolls; 3rdly, mandates emanating directly from the Sovereign in relation to Ireland would, after the same period, be enrolled, like mandates affecting England, on the Close Rolls. Now these two classes, namely, grants and mandates, include, we believe, by far the largest portion of the ancient English Public Records relating to Ireland; 4thly, records of judgments and orders passed or made in England on cases and appeals from Ireland would naturally be enrolled here; accordingly we have in this volume references to early entries of this kind, and the number will probably increase hereafter. The reasons above given may perhaps explain why records of some of the documents in question should be found in England; but the presence here of the many which remain must be differently accounted for.

We append to this preface No. I. a Table of Public Records containing instruments and entries relating to Ireland, abstracts of which are given in this volume; we also append a Table No. II. of persons who have edited a part of those instruments and entries, and a Table No. III. of persons who to our knowledge have given their attention or referred to portions of them in their works.

Ere we proceed to notice some of those instruments and entries we beg to premise a few words by way of explanation.

To persons unacquainted with ancient records, it may be desirable to state that those abstracted in this volume are all written in mediæval Latin and in the usual abbreviated court hand. One of the peculiarities to be found in writing of the olden time is the uncertainty of spelling. The name of Shakspeare for instance was, as is well known, variously spelt, and Sir Walter Raleigh is stated to have written his own name in different ways at different times. If this was so in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., what must have been the uncertainty of spelling more than three centuries previously, in the period from Henry II. to Henry III.? The Anglo-Norman scribes, especially if they wrote from dictation, must have found it difficult to render Irish names of persons and places; and hence we find great variance in this respect. The name of Connaught for instance, a comparatively simple one, will be found rendered in five or six different ways at least. The plan which the Editor adopted in this respect has been generally to write the name as contained on the record, to combine in the index all the names which he believed to refer to the same place or person, and occasionally to give between brackets his own version of the name. But each reader is of course entitled to draw his conclusions from the name as given from the Record. In regard to topographical names, the Editor does not deem it a necessary part of his duty to identify all the Irish names of places that occur. He is not acquainted with Irish, and the various and all engrossing exigencies of this work have prevented him from devoting much time to this point. He has, however, endeavoured to identify some, and he is indebted to Mr. W. M. Hennessy, M.R.I.A., of the Public Record Office of Ireland, a distinguished Irish scholar, to whom he begs here to return his best thanks, for most kindly and ably enabling him to identify others. The Editor must leave the identification of those which remain to Irish archæologists. It may not be out of place to mention here that the Editor has been led into error by the abbreviated form of May, which appears more than once on the Rolls, and by a footnote to p. 505 of Archdall's Irish Monasticon, in rendering in English the name of the Monastery de Magio. That monastery was not situated in the county of Mayo, but was that of Maigue, so styled from the river on which it stood, or more commonly called Monasternenagh, in the county of Limerick. The Editor unfortunately discovered this mistake too late to correct it in a portion of the text, but he has not failed to do so in the Table of Corrigenda at the end of the volume.

We have only to add that the abstracts have in general been made very full, so as to comprise, it is believed, every thing of importance in the documents. In reference to dates, wherever the record contained one it has been given, otherwise the date has been taken from that of the roll; and when the Editor has himself ventured to assign a date to the abstract of an undated document, he has inserted it between brackets in the margin.

We read in Hoveden that, in 1171, King Henry II. having collected a large fleet ordered it to assemble in the port of Milford, near Pembroke. He himself having gathered a great army of horse and foot came to the latter place to meet his ships, and with his army embarked on Saturday the 16th November 1171. On the next day, the 17th November (Giraldus Cambrensis and Matthew Paris say the 18th), he landed at Crook, near Waterford.

This volume opens with extracts from the Pipe Rolls of 17, 18, and 19 Henry II. (Nos. 1-40), of accounts of money paid by the sheriffs and others in various counties of England for hogs, wheat, and oats, beans, cheese, and other supplies, for this army of Ireland, as it is called; of pay to masters, seamen, and equippers of ships to carry supplies; hire of ships, canvas and apparel for them; and payments for horses and their passage; axes, handmills, wooden towers, bridges, spades, pickaxes, and nails, &c., all for Ireland.

After very curious accounts of articles sent to the king in Ireland, we have, in No. 34, payments of 40*l.* for herrings bought at Wexford, and of 55*s.* 11*d.* for horses and garments for Robert, Richard, and Roger, the king's fowlers. No. 37 contains payments of 78*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*, to buy garments for 163 cottagers, who were in the king's service in Ireland; 26*s.* 2*d.* for furbishing the king's swords, and gold to adorn them, and 40*s.* in sterling silver for their points and hilts. In No. 39, the sheriff of Hampshire renders his account of 6*l.* for delivering the hostage of the son of the King of Cork; corody for the same, for Murtough Mac Morrough, and burgesses of Wexford, one night at Winchester, 6*s.* 8*d.*; corodies for the same for 10 nights, 40*s.*; and six robes for Murtough Mac Morrough, and the burgesses of Wexford, 10*l.* 14*s.* 11*d.*, all by the king's writ. No. 40 contains items of 45*s.* for eight ships to carry over 20 knights and five attendants who went with Adam the Archbishop into Ireland; of 27*s.* 6*d.* for the passage into Ireland of William Fitz Aldelm, his associates, and their armour; and of 8*s.* for that of the Archbishop of Dublin. In Nos. 72 and 73, we have the following items:—paid for the passage into Ireland of the knights and attendants of John, the king's son, 34*l.*, by the king's writ; for fully making up 1,600 crannocks of wheat, which the king gave to John, his son, to carry with him into Ireland, 9*l.* and 12*d.*; paid to Robert Ruffus and other attendants of John, the king's son, to procure requisites for his bakehouse and kitchen, 9*l.* 5*s.*; carrying them from Gloucester to Bristol, 6*s.*; cost of conveying the harness of the king's son, 8*s.*; and corodies for the king's son and his household while staying at Gloucester, 40*l.* and 14*d.* For other items of this kind we must refer to the abstracts themselves, Nos. 1-84.

In connexion with this expedition to Ireland, the feudal exaction known as scutage (described in Madox's Hist. of the Exchequer, Vol. I., p. 629) was levied out of knights' fees in the counties of England. It was called the "Scutage of Ireland," in the same sense as we have subsequently the scutages of Wales, of Scotland, and of Poitou, and amounted, according to the Red Book, to 20*s.*, a knight's fee. The accounts relating to it are entered at great length on the Pipe Rolls. The first mention of this scutage of Ireland occurs under the county of Lancaster;

Pipe 18, Henry II., Rot. 5 dors. (No. 26); from No. 43, it appears that the Bishop of London owed 20*l.* for this scutage, and 17*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* for scutage, which he did not acknowledge to be due. In No. 47, the citizens of London render their account of 100*l.* 34*s.* 4*d.*, of the "gift" of the city for this scutage; this account is continued in Nos. 49, 57, 61, 68, and 77. Several persons are charged to this exaction under the general title of "scutage of knights" "who neither went into Ireland, nor sent knights or money thither;" on the other hand we have in Nos. 4, 10, and 24 accounts of money levied out of the lands of persons who went into that country against the king's command.

The accounts of this scutage are continued through 15 subsequent Pipe Rolls of Henry II., and even occasionally occur on those for Richard I. to that for the 10th year of his reign. The Editor had taken from these accounts extracts to the number of upwards of 230, but on consideration has deemed it advisable to omit them for these, among other reasons, because what is called the scutage of Ireland concerns England more than that country; and the printing of these abstracts would have overburdened the text and index of this volume with a multitude of names, most of which would probably be of little interest in Ireland.

In No. 38 we have abstracts of three letters from Pope Alexander III. on the conquest of Ireland. The first is to the Papal Legate and the four archbishops of that country, exhorting them to aid the king in governing it; the second is to the king himself, admonishing him to remove certain practices, to recall the people to the worship of Christian faith, and to preserve and enlarge the rights of the church; the third is to the kings and princes of Ireland, exhorting them to persevere in their fealty to the King of England. No. 50 refers to an undated charter of grant from Henry II. to the Abbey of Mellifont. It is difficult to fix precisely the date of this charter.

The entries on the Pipe Rolls, the three papal letters and the charter above referred to, comprise all that we have been able to find relating to Ireland for the reign of Henry II. The reign of Richard I. which follows is barren of records relating to Ireland, and, save the accounts of scutage on the Pipe Rolls already mentioned, nothing relating to that country has been found during any part of that monarch's reign.

We now come to the reign of John, in which instruments and entries relating to Ireland become much more numerous and diversified, for in it commence the great series of Patent, Close, and Charter Rolls. Copies of all the entries on the Patent, Close and Charter Rolls, for this reign, and of those on the Close Rolls to the 11th year of Henry III., have as mentioned in list No. II., been printed, under the Record Commission of 1831, in four volumes folio, by Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, the present Deputy Keeper of Records. These volumes are among the most valuable contributions to record knowledge that have ever been given. At the end of entries on the Patent, Close, and Charter Rolls generally, and occasionally on other Rolls, the names of places where the instruments and entries were dated are given. These places are of importance, because until the reign of Richard II. they show where the early monarchs were at the date mentioned. In the introduction to his printed volume of Patent Rolls Sir T. D. Hardy fully enters into this subject, and gives us from these places a very valuable itinerary of King John, showing at a glance where that monarch was on most of the days of his reign. These names of places have been retained in the abstracts, but, none of them relating to Ireland, it has been thought unnecessary to enter them in the index.

The items contained in that index, and especially those under the general titles of the King, Ireland, and the various justiciaries (of whom a list follows the index), will give references to abstracts of many important documents relating to Ireland of the reign of John; but among them, those referring to the following persons and matters, may perhaps be entitled to especial attention as being important or remarkable in themselves, or as materially illustrating the history of that monarch's reign in connexion with Ireland. Those persons and matters are:—Walter de Lacy, John de Courcy, Hugh de Lacy; the king's Scotch adherents in Ireland; the king's passage to Ireland in 1210, and the entries from the Prestita Roll of the same date; his dealing or relations with the church; his dealings with Irish kings and magnates; grants and mandates generally; legal matters, and miscellaneous. We therefore proceed to notice in the order we have indicated some of the abstracts relating to those persons and matters.

The first mention which we find of Walter de Lacy's name is in a mandate to the justiciary of Ireland dated 4th September 1199, and commanding him to inquire whether Henry Tirol had sided with John de Courcy and W. de Lacy (the initial only of his Christian name is given) and aided them in destroying the king's land of Ireland (No. 90); in 204 we find the names of hostages given for Walter; 402 is a remarkable document containing his submission offered by his emissaries to the king at Dublin, June 28, 1210; 596 refers to a deed of agreement July 5, 1215, made between the king and him; and in 628 the king receives him into grace, and restores his lands, July 28, same year.

As to John de Courcy, the justiciary and Walter de

Lacy are commanded to cause him to come to the king's service; if he does not do so they shall cause judgment in the king's court to be taken out against him; and if it deprives him of his land, they shall cause eight cantreds thereof to be given to Walter and Hugh de Lacy (224); in the next entry the Barons of Ulster are commanded to cause John to come to the king's service (225); then follows a grant dated November 13, 1204, to Walter and Hugh de Lacy of eight cantreds in Ulster (240); and we next have the names of hostages for John de Courcy, of Ulster (259). The latter appears subsequently to have come to the king's service, for there is a prest of 20 marks paid at Dublin to Richard de Chambre on John's behalf (409); and the justiciary is commanded to provide Affrica, his wife, with land for her maintenance (482).

In reference to Hugh de Lacy there is a charter of grant to him, dated May 29, 1205, of the land of Ulster, whereof the king had belted him earl, to hold as John de Courcy held it when Hugh conquered and took him prisoner in the field (263 and 260); the king shortly afterwards directs the justiciary to place reliance on Hugh's representations regarding the king's interests (268); but the king subsequently writes to Hugh that he will appropriate this land, as Walter de Lacy had not paid the fine which he had made with the king for its restoration, though the king had been a long time in his neighbourhood (550).

Of the king's Scotch adherents in Ireland we have mention of Alan of Galloway, and of Thomas Earl of Athol, his brother. To the first the king granted no less than 140 knights' fees in the North of Ireland, near the Bann, which the Bishop of Norwich [as justiciary] delivered, in May or June 1212, to persons on his behalf at Carrickfergus before the knights and men of the province (427); the forest, fairs, and markets belonging to that land were also granted to him (463). To the Earl of Athol there is a grant of O'Neill's lands in Kenlion [Kinel-Owen] (468); six knights' fees (474) and other lands, all in the North of Ireland (565).

The Miscæ Roll of the 11th of John gives the first intimation of that monarch's intended passage to Ireland, for we find on it items for 45 dozen skins of parchment to be carried with the king into that country. There are also items for making a scarlet cape for the king, and thread for William the tailor (400). To collect the army which accompanied the king to Ireland feudal exactions were put in force, and each holder of a knight's fee in the counties of England who did not present himself had to pay a fine amounting, as stated in one place, to 40s. a fee. The accounts of this exaction are entered at great length on the Pipe Roll of the 12th of John, under the general title of Fines or Scutage for the Passage of Ireland, and are continued on the Pipe Rolls of the 13th, 14th, 15th, and 16th John. There is subsequently on each of the Pipe Rolls of the 8th, 10th, 11th, and 13th Henry III. one entry relating to the passage of Ireland. The Editor had taken extracts of all the entries relating to this passage, but for the same reasons which actuated him in regard to the entries of the scutage of Ireland in the previous reign of Henry II. he has deemed it advisable to omit most of them.

The Prestita Roll of the 12th of John, a copy of which has been edited by Sir Thomas Hardy under the Record Commission, gives much information regarding the movements of that king when on his way to, and while in, Ireland. We find on it accounts of moneys paid for fees to officials; prests (i.e. loans or advances) to knights and mariners, and pay to soldiers of the king's army, with the names of places in Ireland where, and the date when, those payments were made. The abstracts taken from this roll are to be found in Nos. 401, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 409, 410, and 418.

The entries on this roll are all the more valuable, because owing to some lamentable mischance the Patent, Close, Charter, and Fine Rolls for the 12th of John, being in fact all the principal Chancery Records of that period, are not to be found at the Public Record Office, and are even supposed not to exist; the same may be said of those rolls for the 11th and 13th of John; and as regards the Close Rolls for the 10th of John also. That they once existed can scarcely be doubted. We have thus lost, as regards the rolls for the 12th of John, records of all the grants and mandates regarding Ireland made by that king when actually present in that country for some months in 1210. Among these would doubtless have been found records of the appointment of John de Grey, Bishop of Norwich, as justiciary of Ireland; of the charter of King John, mentioned hereafter in No. 1602, which the magnates of that country swore to obey, touching the observance of English laws and customs in Ireland; and most probably some information regarding the preferment of Henry de Londres to the see of Dublin.

The Prestita Roll above referred to contains an army list, as it were, of the king's knights who were with him in Ireland; but the names are so numerous, that it has been thought expedient merely to give selections from them, though all the names had been copied by the Editor. It is curious that among those names are to be found several existing in Ireland at the present day, such as Mara, Staunton, Darcy, Butler, Rochfort [de Rupe Forti], Savage [Salvagijs], Barnewall, Barry, Clery, Fitz Simon, and others; but this is a point which must be left to genealogists.

In regard to John's relations or dealings with the church, there appear to be no records of regular licences to elect or congés d'élire, and few of royal assents to elections to Irish sees in this reign, but the records referred to in the following abstracts are, among others, worthy of attention.

We have first references to some documents evidencing a controversy between the king and the church regarding the archbishopric of Armagh. In No. 168, August 15, 1202, the king writes to the Papal Legate that certain Irish bishops therein named and the Archdeacon of Armagh, having shown a manifest desire to work against the king's right and dignity in regard to that see, the king renewed the appeal he had made; No. 177 refers to a document remarkable for being in the form of a grant (the words being Noveritis nos concessisse) to Master Humphrey, of Tickhill, of the church of Armagh and the primacy of Ireland; in No. 178 the king commands the suffragans of Armagh to join him in his appeal regarding Eugene called elect of Armagh, who had gone to Rome that he might be promoted to that see, and by no means to receive him as archbishop; in No. 200 the king approves of Ralph Archdeacon of Meath, who with two others had been elected or nominated for this see; but Eugene was nevertheless actually preferred to the archbishopric, for in No. 331 the king sends him, under the title of Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of Ireland, to execute the episcopal office in the see of Exeter; and in No. 338 letters of protection are granted to him as archbishop.

In No. 276 the king commands the justiciary to restore to John Archbishop of Dublin all the lands and liberties which he had when dissension first arose between him and the king regarding foresters.

Having learnt the death of Matthew Archbishop of Cashel, the king notifies to the chapter and suffragans his approval of Albin Bishop of Ferns as successor, and directs them to hasten his promotion (291); the king's directions, however, in this respect do not appear to have been carried into effect.

In No. 444 the king commands William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, in reference to his council as to establishing the peace of the church, that he notify under what form it seemed meet to the common council of the king's subjects of Ireland that this peace should be confirmed without detriment to the king's independence and rights.

Then follows a very remarkable declaration of the magnates of Ireland regarding the Pope, No. 448. This document is undated, but the names of the magnates clearly point to the reign of John. This being so, the Editor has no doubt that it refers to the controversy between that king and the church regarding the preferment of Stephen Langton to the see of Canterbury, and has therefore assigned to it the date of in or about 1212, in which year, according to Hume, the Pope actually took the step, which the magnates had heard he was about to take, of absolving the subjects of the king from their fealty.

No. 475, July 30, 1213, refers to a grant by the king to Henry Archbishop of Dublin of the bishopric and Abbey of Glendalough, saving for his life to Abbot Thomas his tenement of half a cantred, with other grants to the archbishop. In 481 the king commands that archbishop honourably to entertain the Archbishop of Tuam, so long as he shall be in exile and remain with him.

No. 489, October 3, 1213, is an abstract of the well known charter of King John, whereby he offers to God, the church, and the Pope his kingdoms of England and Ireland, and taking them back as fees swears fealty therefor to the Pope. In token thereof the church shall yearly receive in lieu of service 1,000 marks sterling, namely, 700 for England and 300 for Ireland. The king binds himself and his successors, on pain of forfeiting their right to the kingdom, never to contravene this grant.

Then immediately follows (490) a writ of Liberate to the treasurer and chamberlains for payment to the Legate of 1,000 marks of the farm of England and Ireland, being, as it would seem, the first year's payment of the annual tribute or subsidy to the pope mentioned in the previous number.

No. 521 refers to a bull of Pope Innocent [III.], Oct. 28, 1214, commanding the archbishops, bishops, abbots, prelates, princes, earls, barons, knights, and people of Ireland to preserve in fealty to John King of the English. No. 566, June 27, 1215, relates to a grant to the canons of the church of St. Patrick in the suburbs of Dublin of the church of Crumlin which the King, when Earl of Morton, had given as a prebend to the former church, and No. 621 July 13, same year, to one to the church of the Holy Trinity, Dublin [Christ Church], and to the Archbishop of Dublin, of the cantred of Okonach' [Old Connaught, near Bray] with the vill and advowson of Tibrary; No. 649, Sept. 6, same year, is an abstract of a grant of vills and two islands in the sea to Patrick's church, Cashel, and to Donat archbishop thereof; while in No. 651 the king urgently begs the Cardinal Stephen de Fossa Nova to let Henry Archbishop of Dublin have 500 marks on loan.

The following are some of the abstracts referring to the king's dealings with the native kings and princes of Ireland. In No. 205, about March 1203-4, John writes to the King of Connaught that he will hold good whatever the justiciary of Ireland and the Archdeacon of Stafford may do by counsel of Walter de Lacy regarding matters between the king and the King of Connaught.

In No. 222, Aug. 31, 1204, the king approves of a quitclaim or release to be made to him by the king of Connaught of two-thirds of Connaught, the other third to remain to the latter at a yearly rent of 100 marks; and the king commands the justiciary to select for his use the two-thirds in which lie the best towns and harbours and which are fittest for fortifying castles, &c.; No. 279 refers to further negotiations on the subject.

In No. 385 the king commands the King of Connaught and the other kings and magnates of Ireland to give credence to what the Bishop of Ferns, the justiciary of Ireland, and Philip of Worcester shall tell them on the king's behalf; and Nos. 509 and 530 contain protection for Cathal, King of Connaught. In No. 531 the Archbishop of Dublin is commanded to buy scarlet cloth for robes for the kings of Ireland; No. 654, Sept. 13, 1215, contains an abstract of the king's charter of grant to the King of Connaught of the land of Connaught, rendering yearly to the king at the Exchequer, Dublin, 300 marks, with a reservation of the Castle of Athlone; and in No. 656 the king directs certain persons to receive from the King of Connaught 2,500 marks, being the amount due at Michaelmas out of 5,000 marks for which the land of Connaught had been granted to the latter; with further mandate to take from him 12 marks for the chancellor's fee.

We now come to grants of lands in Ireland. The Charter Rolls show that, especially in the beginning of his reign, John bestowed them profusely among his adherents. In addition to those we have already drawn attention to, the following may be noticed:—Grant to Thomas Fitz Maurice of five knights' fees in the cantred of Fontimel (93); to William of Naas of the castle of Karakitel, with knights' fees (94); to William de Burgh, the father no doubt of the great Richard de Burgh, of Ardpatrik, the residue of the cantred of Fontimel (95), and of the Castle of Tibrach' (122); to Milo le Bret of lands near Dublin with licence to take foxes and hares in the forest of Ireland (100); to Hugh Hose of land without the city of Dublin between the stone gate near the bridge and the grange lands of the canons of the Holy Trinity, &c. (121); to William de Breouse of the honor of Limerick (147); for this grant William gave to the king 5,000 marks (146); to William de Barry of three cantreds in Corcaia [Cork] to hold by the service of ten knights (340); to Jordan Lochard of the land of Kilsanehan to hold of the king, by the service of one archer to be rendered in guarding the city of Dublin (346); to Philip de Prendergast of 40 knights' fees, of which 15 were between Cork and Insovenach' (348); to William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, of his land of Leinster, to hold by the service of 100 knights (381); to the king of Man of one knight's fee on the sea near Carlingford, which the Bishop of Norwich assigned to him, and of 100 seams of wheat receivable at Drogheda (428); to persons who had taken lands from the citizens of Limerick that they might have and hold those lands (579); to Muriard OBren [O'Brien] of cantreds in Thomond (629 and 669); and to Richard de Burgh of all the land of Connaught which William his father held of the king (653).

Of grants to monasteries and religious bodies we have besides others those to the Knights Templars (85); the Knights Hospitallers of Ireland of liberties similar to those previously granted to the Knights Hospitallers of England (123); the Monastery of Mary, Dublin (127, 130, and 131); the Abbot of Glendalough (132); the Abbey de Magio [Monasternenagh or Maigue], lands in the county of Limerick and elsewhere (136), this grant is remarkable for the great number of Irish names of places it mentions. In No. 220 we have the king's confirmation of the union entered into between the convent of St. Peter of Batl and the Hospital of St. John of Waterford. Curious particulars follow of the articles of union.

The grants to cities and towns comprise four to Dublin, namely, of metes, liberties, franchises, and fishing (138 and 577), of a fair (510); and of power to make a bridge over the Liffey (511); one to the burgesses of the bridge of Drogheda of the law of breteill' [bridge-toll] (473); and a similar grant to the burgesses of Dungarvan (578).

Of grants of appointments we have those of Meyler Fitz Henry as justiciary of Ireland (133); of John Marshall as Marshal (353); of Henry Archbishop of Dublin as justiciary (466); and of Geoffrey de Mariscis also as justiciary (608).

Mandates relating to Ireland in this reign are numerous and multifarious. No. 125 contains one to all persons holding lands in the Marches to fortify their castles otherwise the king will seize their lands. In No. 235 the king commands Walter de Lacy to deliver to the justiciary the city of Limerick committed to William de Breouse, as the king could not maintain peace in Connaught and Cork unless he held that city in his hand. Mandate to the justiciary to cause an inquisition to be taken whether the Castle of Kilmehal [Kilmallock] and certain cantreds belong to the kingdom of Cork or the kingdom of Limerick, and if to the former the justiciary shall take them into the king's hand as his demesne (289). No market established in Ireland after the king's passage into England shall be held (349). Mandate to William, Earl of Pembroke, to come to the king at Chester with John Bishop of Norwich and the king's Irish subjects. They shall bring 200 knights and such a force of foot and horse, with supplies, as may prove to the king that they desire his advancement and the confusion of his enemies (435). Mandate to the Archbishop of Dublin, then justiciary, to inspect the king's charter to Richard de Burgh, and the letters of the Bishop of Norwich, formerly justiciary, and according to their tenor to cause seisin of Richard's Irish land to be given to him (506). Then follows a mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to cause to be inquired what purprestures [encroachments] had been made in the king's demesne lands of the county of Waterford, by whom, and to cause them to be amended (571). No. 586 refers to a mandate to the justiciary to deliver seisin to Maurice Fitz Gerald of the lands of Gerald, his father, on his giving security for a fine of 60 marks. In 688 the justiciary is commanded to cause to be delivered to William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, the house of Ernye of the earl's inheritance called the Salmon Leap; and in No. 709 there is a mandate to the same that if he have in his possession hides and wool of the king to the value of 300 marks he deliver them to Henry Archbishop of Dublin.

As to legal matters in Ireland there are records of but few in this reign. No. 116 refers to an abstract of a curious criminal pleading on the Coram Rege Rolls, one of the very few entries relating to Ireland contained on the earlier rolls of this class. It relates to the murder of William le Brun in the dike of the then castle of Dublin; and from No. 114 we learn that Richard Gille Michel and two others gave to the king 66 marks 2s. 3d. for licence to agree in an appeal had against them by Owen le Brun of the death of his father, probably William le Brun above mentioned.

In No. 126 the king wills that no recognizances be made and no outlawry issue in Ireland save in or by the king's court. No. 209 contains a commission to Walter de Lacy and others to hear the complaints of the justiciary against William de Burgh; the justiciary has been commanded to abide judgment before the justices regarding William's charges against him; in No. 213, however, the king grants to William respite of all complaints, takes him into Normandy, and orders all his lands and castles in Ireland to be restored to him, saving the land of Connaught which remains in the king's hands during pleasure. In No. 236 the king regulates the issuing of writs by the justiciary, and defines their limitation; and in No. 328 after giving to the justiciary various orders in criminal cases, he commands him to seize the lands, chattels, and body of Norman Clatere, a citizen of Dublin, who had left that city, and gone to reside on the land of Walter de Lacy.

Of miscellaneous documents the following may be noticed:—In No. 91 Hamo de Valoignes gives to the king 1,000 marks to have peace touching his Irish account, no doubt as justiciary; in No. 115, Roger de Kivilli gives to the king 10 besants for letters of protection in going to and trading in Ireland; No. 151 states the amount due by the citizens of Dublin [to the king] as 400½ marks, with 5 palfreys and 1 goshawk. It may not be unworthy of remark here that palfreys are frequently mentioned in records of this time as objects of debt; an ordinary palfrey appears to have stood for 5 marks or 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, and one of the best for double that amount. In No. 201, the king urges the Irish clergy to give him such an aid against the King of France as shall be pointed out to them, and writes similar letters to the earls, barons, knights, citizens, burgesses, and the king's subjects generally in Ireland.

No. 226, dated about the end of August 1204, is a document of great interest. It contains letters of the king to the justiciary of Ireland, who had apprised the former that he had no place in which to deposit royal treasure; the king thereupon commands him to cause a castle to be constructed in Dublin with good dikes and strong walls; and for this purpose to take 300 marks. The king further commands the justiciary to compel the citizens of Dublin to fortify their city, and wills that there be a fair there.

The letters in No. 315, February 1206-7, are also of interest. In them the king thanks his barons and knights of Meath for the fidelity they had preserved towards him when dissension arose between Walter de Lacy, their lord, and the justiciary of Ireland touching the city of Limerick. The king exhorts them to persevere in that fidelity for he will not bear it lightly that his justiciary suffer damage or dishonour. Similar letters to the barons and knights of Leinster.

In No. 352, November 9, 1207, the king commands all persons in Ireland not to answer in any court respecting their free tenements save by writ of the king or the justiciary, nor touching any plea of the Crown save before the king, his justiciary, or the justices sent to administer law. The king forbids selling or purchasing by any money save that of Ireland, which he wills to be current throughout the whole kingdom.

No. 426, May 9, 1212, is an order for delivery from prison of Sir William de Audley, knight, taken prisoner in the Castle of Carrickfergus. References to several other orders of the same kind will be found in the index under the head of the Castle of Carrickfergus. In 674 the king commands William de Serlaund, constable of Carrickfergus, to admit the justiciary into that castle with any force he may wish to place in it for its defence.

We here end our notice of abstracts of Public Records relating to Ireland in the reign of John, and now proceed to notice some of the documents of the reign of Henry III. relating to the following subjects or topics in connexion with Ireland:—The king's accession; the church; Irish kings and magnates; justiciaries; the government of Ireland; legal matters; Hugh de Lacy's war; the king's intended visits to Ireland; Richard Earl of Pembroke's war; the king's expedition to Scotland; his expedition to Wales; the crusades; subsidies and aids; monasteries; municipalities; Chancery; the Mint; inquisitions; grants; mandates; castles; commerce; and miscellaneous.

Shortly after the coronation of Henry III., October 28, 1216, the king writes to the justiciary of Ireland letters which read very like a speech from the throne at the present day. After notifying the death and obsequies of King John, it was, he said, his will to forget the angry feeling which once existed between his father and some of his nobles, and by a renewal of liberties to restore the good days of their ancestors. He had granted to the prelates, earls, and barons of England the liberties asked for, and they had returned home rejoicing. In regard to sending the queen mother and his brother to Ireland he should consult his council. The same liberties should be granted to the justiciary and the king's subjects of Ireland as had been granted to his subjects of England (723). These letters were soon after followed by the grant hereafter mentioned to the king's subjects of Ireland of the promised liberties.

The documents relating to the church are more numerous than those relating to any other subject during the 36 years of the reign of Henry III. comprised in this volume. We have first mandates from the king commanding the justiciary not to allow Irishmen to be elected or promoted in cathedral churches in Ireland; the clerics of the Archbishop of Dublin and other Englishmen shall be promoted to sees and dignities when vacant (736 and 739). The archbishops and bishops of Ireland having, on the other hand, subsequently issued an ordinance that no Englishman should be received as a canon in their churches, Pope Innocent IV. commanded them to revoke their ordinance (3084).

We have also several documents relating to a dispute in 1219 between an official of the king and Henry Archbishop of Dublin regarding the forest of Dublin, complaints by the archbishop of false aspersions, &c., and a complaint against him by the citizens of Dublin.

In No. 849, August 27, 1218, the king had commanded that no forester should be troublesome or burdensome to the archbishop, by exacting food from him, the king granted him freedom from that grievance. In No. 892, however, Thomas Fitz Adam, keeper of the king's forest in Ireland, writes to the Dean of Lichfield that he had requested the archbishop to cause the officials of the forest to feed, as in the reign of King John, the servants placed in the forest for its custody. The archbishop answered that the forest and beasts were his, and that he would not allow his men to feed the servants against his liberty and the rights of his church. In No. 926 Thomas Fitz Adam writes to the king complaining that he had been excommunicated because he had arrested on the archbishop's land a malefactor who from the time of King John had spoiled the forest. Thomas, as he alleges, was persecuted; intercourse with men and the convenience of towns were denied to him. Then follows a letter from the archbishop to the king complaining of Thomas for afforesting his land, introducing new customs and exactions, and seizing his men (932). The king in his pungent reply dated March 10, 1219-20 (933), prays the archbishop to be as solicitous in preserving the king's rights as he wished the king to be in guarding the archbishop's liberties. Had commanded Thomas Fitz Adam to desist from troubling the archbishop with unjust exactions, hoping that when they met amends would be made for any trespass against either of them. Nos. 951, 1317, 1757, and 1769 had no doubt the effect of ending this controversy with the church of Dublin regarding the forest. By the two last of these, dated respectively November 8, and December 4, 1229, the king commanded that all woods within the lands of the see therein described should be disafforested.

Nos. 904 and 925 are letters from the archbishop to the king complaining of false aspersions, reminding the king of his services, and praying that the latter would command his justiciary to refrain from infringing on the possessions and dignities of the archbishop and his church. No. 927 is a letter from the archbishop to the Dean of Lichfield on the same subject. The archbishop cannot believe that the king would wish to impair the great liberties conferred on the church by King John, or to revoke those granted by himself in the flower of his youth.

The complaint of the citizens of Dublin against the archbishop for an infringement of their liberties, dated soon after March 22, 1219-20, will be found referred to in No. 935.

Later in the year 1219 a controversy having arisen between the king and the Archbishop of Cashel regarding the new vill of Cashel, we have several documents bearing on this point. In No. 920 the Archbishop of Dublin writes to the king that the Archbishop of Cashel being about to depart for Rome had ordered his province to be placed under an interdict and the justiciary to be excommunicated, unless restitution were made to him of the new vill. The Archbishop of Dublin thereupon supplicates the king by restitution of the vill to withdraw the Archbishop of Cashel from his purpose of proceeding to the pope. The king in his answer dated Jan. 24, 1219-20 (923), thanks the Archbishop of Dublin for his solicitude in obtaining that the vill should be sequestered into the archbishop's hand until the octaves of Easter. The vill had come into the king's hand by the finding of a jury of persons of the highest station in those parts. The king then being in possession prays the archbishop to restore the vill to him at the expiration of the above term. A bull of Pope Honorius III. follows May 19, 1222, commanding the Archbishop of Cashel to relax the sentence of interdict he had published against the king's subjects and lands (1034). In No. 1051 the king constitutes the Archbishop of Dublin as his proctor in the cause between the king and the Archbishop of Cashel brought by authority of papal letters touching the vill in question, and will by him hold valid the decree of certain bishops therein named; and in No. 1633, Nov. 16, 1228, the king remits his claim, and grants the vill in frankalmoign to the then Archbishop of Cashel.

Then follow documents of various kinds relating to the church, namely: — Protection, April 3, 1225, for the preachers of the fabric of the church of St. Patrick, Dublin, going through Ireland to beg alms for that fabric (1241); the king writes to the pope about Dec. 1225, that he is well pleased if it pleases his holiness that the churches of Limerick and Waterford be united; the seat of the see to remain at Waterford (1337); mandate, Jan. 18, 1226-27, that when the king shall have received letters from the Archbishop of Armagh testifying that certain of his canons of Louth, excommunicated for contumacy and excesses, had persisted for 40 days, the justiciary shall, according to the custom of England, judge the excommunicated persons by their bodies till they shall have made satisfaction to holy church (1481); grant, May 21, 1227, in consequence of the poverty of the clergy, that the justiciary may give in place of the king free power to the proper parties to elect to all vacant sees save 11 therein enumerated (1519); the king grants, Oct. 10, 1227, so far as in him lies, that the see of Clogher be united to that of Armagh; and prays the pope to give his consent to the union of the two sees (1559); grant accordingly, Feb. 8, 1240-41 (2505); the king prays Pope Gregory IX., July 16, 1228, to consent to the union of the sees of Waterford and Lismore, the bishops of which are so poor that they are obliged to beg without their sees for necessaries (1616); inspeximus of three charters of King John, April 13, 1230, granting and confirming to the Archbishop of Dublin the lands and possessions of his see, with the bishopric of Glendalough and liberties and free customs (1787, 1788, and 1789); mandate to the abbots, priors, earls, barons, knights, citizens, and burgesses within the see of Dublin to pay tithes for pools and fisheries, as the king did not wish to imperil his soul by withholding such tithes (1798); letters of the king to the pope, May 20, 1231, complaining that the bishops of Ireland strove to deprive him of his right of having the custody of vacant sees, and contended that the tenants of the sees should no longer require justice from the king's court (1890); bull of Pope Gregory IX., July 20, 1231, prohibiting archbishops and bishops in Ireland from fulminating unjust sentences of excommunication against the king's justiciaries, sheriffs, and bailiffs (1901); letters of the king to the cardinals, Feb. 25, 1234-35, respecting 500 marks of the annual tribute to the church, which they felt aggrieved at not being paid to them; according to King John's charter the whole amount ought to go to the pope (2252); Hubert Bishop of Limerick to the king, praying that he will regard the oppressions brought on his church by Geoffrey de Mariscis and William his son (2267); Griffin Bishop of Lismore to the king, beseeching him to avoid Geoffrey de Mariscis, William his son, and others as excommunicated (2268); mandate to the justiciary of Ireland, Feb. 10, 1236-37, to hear the complaints of the Bishop of Clogher touching the injuries inflicted on him by the Archbishop of Armagh (2377); letter of Thomas Bishop of Down to the king, complaining of the exactions of Sir Walter de Burgh, Earl of Ulster; supplicates the king that as preceding bishops of Down were wont to stand against the earls of Ulster in defence of kingly rights, so the king will now give ear to the bishop's grievances. From the first coming of the English into Ulster the king's name had been commemorated in each mass throughout the Down diocese, where there are more priests and religious than in any other equal part of Ireland (2551); it is difficult to fix precisely the date of this interesting letter which is undated. Mandate, Oct. 28, 1243, to the justiciary not to interfere if the Archbishop of Cashel should sue the Bishops of Limerick, Lismore, Killaloe, Ardfert, and Emly, his suffragans, touching their spiritualities; not to permit the archbishop to disturb the bishops regarding their temporalities, and not to lay his hand on the latter, at the archbishop's mandate, without the king's special order (2640). The Archbishop of Armagh has given two subjects of complaint to the king; first, because he obtained from the pope that the king's subjects should be sued out of the realm concerning lands and advowsons of churches; and, secondly, because his petition made mention of the king's privilege (2717); the Pope having on the king's petition ordered the celebration of the nativity and translation of King Edward the Confessor, the king's predecessor, the king prays the Bishop of Killaloe to cause this feast to be solemnly observed in each church of his diocese (2725); a similar letter to the Bishop of Waterford (2726); letters of the king dated about the end of April 1245, expressing his astonishment that through fear of excommunication the justiciary should have deferred to give judgment regarding the disseisin which the Bishop of Cloyne confesses he has wrought against the Bishop of Emly; the justiciary shall proceed to judgment, amerce the disseisor, and restore seisin to the latter bishop. As for the judges who proceeded in the ecclesiastical court, and the Bishop of Cloyne who prosecuted this plea, the justiciary shall cause them to be arrested and imprisoned (2741); June 1, 1245, the magnates of England murmur on account of the oppressions which the pope inflicts on religious men; having learnt that John Ruffus had been sent to Ireland to cause similar oppressions, the king commands the justiciary not to allow any person bearing papal letters to extort money from religious men, or to do anything which may cause injury to Ireland (2746); bull of Pope Innocent IV., July 21, 1245, confirming all the privileges, indulgences, and immunities granted by the papal see to the churches of England and Ireland (2764); the Archbishop of Cashel [had stated] that if he found the election to the see of Limerick to be canonical he should confirm it notwithstanding the king's dignity; he was enjoined to revoke whatever he had attempted in prejudice of the king, and his temporalities were ordered to be taken into the king's hand if he did not recall his error (3125).

In addition to the above documents relating to the church in Ireland we have a considerable number of licences to elect, or congés d'élire, and of royal assents granted to elections made of archbishops and bishops in various churches. References to these will be found under the titles of the several dioceses in the index. That the formalities of a previous congé d'élire, and of the royal assent to elections were insisted on we have proofs in the documents referred to in Nos. 750, 797, 856, 1838, 1862, 1908, 2318, and 2319, 2698, 2769, 2829, 2844, 2933, and 2953.

In reference to Irish kings and magnates we have the following documents. Protection for Kathal, King of Connaught (928 and 1164); letter from him to Hubert de Burgh, justiciary of England, assuring the latter that he is anxious to preserve his friendship, and begging of him to agree to his petition to the king (980); July 18, 1222, the king accepts the fine of 200 marks which the King of Thomond has made with the justiciary for the land of Thomond, and commands that it be delivered to him (1046); same date, grant to him of that land to hold till the king's full age at 100*l.* a year rent, and a fine of 200 marks (1050); letter of Kathal, King of Connaught, to the king regarding Hugh de Lacy (1174), this will be noticed among the documents relating to the war of the latter; another letter from the same Kathal to the king assuring him of his fidelity and praying that the king will grant to his son Aedth a charter in fee of Connaught, &c. (1184); mandate to the justiciary to cause the said Aedth to have for his maintenance on the king's service seisin of lands of William de Lacy, the king's enemy (1195); June 30, 1226, mandate to the justiciary to cause Oethus, or Aedth, son of the King of Connaught to be summoned before him at the king's court to surrender the land of Connaught which he ought no longer to hold on account of his father's and his own forfeiture (1402); mandate to the justiciary that if it be to the honour and advantage of the king he take a ransom from Iviena, who was the wife of the King of Connaught, for her release from prison, if not that he suffer her to go free (1688); Richard de Burgh, justiciary of Ireland, having seized and imprisoned Fedhlim, son of a former King of Connaught, the king commands that he be liberated on finding sureties to abide any charge that may be made against him (1975); ere Fedhlim, son of the late King of Connaught, came to England to confer with the king he should strive to take the castle of Miloc; when the castle should have been taken, Connaught quieted, and both delivered to the justiciary it was the king's pleasure that he should come (2039); letters of safe conduct for the said Fedhlim about to come to England to confer with the king (2644 and 2738); letters of protection for him till the king's arrival in Ireland (2778); the king wills that for 2,200 marks, to be rendered to him, Conor O'Brien shall hold during good service the land which his father held by charter of King John (3054); the king to O. O'Brien of Thomond; had commanded his justiciary to inquire regarding the offer he had made of 500*l.* for a grant in fee of the land which he holds to farm of the king (3114).

Justiciaries appear to have exercised judicial as well as executive functions in Ireland. A list of those mentioned in this volume follows the index as already stated; and grouped under their names in the latter will be found references to the principal mandates given to each justiciary for the government of Ireland or otherwise. The first justiciary mentioned in the reign of Henry III. is Geoffrey de Marisco, who had been appointed in the last year of the reign of John. On April 23, 1219 (No. 872), the king notifies that as Geoffrey was bound to the Crusades and had been called before the king touching the state of Ireland, the care and custody of that country had been committed to Henry Archbishop of Dublin. Geoffrey, however, still continued in office as the mandates addressed to him show. But subsequently on July 17, 1221, the king writes to Thomas Fitz Anthony making certain complaints against Geoffrey, in consequence of which he is provoked, he says, to desire that Geoffrey no longer preside over Ireland (1001). On the 4th of October following Geoffrey resigned his office, and in November following surrendered the king's castles (1015). His successor was Henry Archbishop of Dublin (997, 1001), to whom the king on August 8, 1223, wrote letters of complaint, founded on representations of the men of Dublin, regarding certain proceedings of his in the government of Ireland. These things, says the king, are contrary to the king's right and dignity and are more disparaging to the justiciary's fame, because great power had been given to him as the king's lieutenant in Ireland. The king therefore commands the justiciary to refrain from these things, otherwise the king will lay heavy hands on them (1130). The Archbishop of Dublin remained in office till Hugh de Lacy's war; he was then succeeded by William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, May 2, 1224 (1185). When we come to mention this war we shall have occasion to draw attention to a very remarkable letter or dispatch regarding it, written by the earl when justiciary. On November 8, 1224, the king having called the earl into England Geoffrey de Mariscis was in his absence appointed to attend to the king's affairs and the preservation of peace in Ireland (1224). The Earl of Pembroke having subsequently on the 22nd of June 1226 surrendered his office (1380), three days afterwards Geoffrey de Mariscis was again regularly appointed (1383). The sum of 580*l.* a year was granted to him as salary (1413). Having proceeded to Ireland Geoffrey writes to the king a letter dated about August 1226, giving a remarkable account of the then state of that country. On arriving at Waterford the magnates there met him, he says, and gave assurances that they would obey the king's mandates. Was about to proceed thence to Dublin when he heard that William Earl Marshall was going to oppose his passage with all the force of Leinster. In Dublin the king's subjects had rendered their oaths of fealty with some exceptions. Theobald Walter on being asked to do so excused himself, asserting that he could not, unless in presence of the earl, part with the custody of the castles confided to him by the latter. Theobald had fortified the castle of Dublin with a force against the king. All the castles of Ireland were fortified against the king save the castle of Limerick in custody of Richard de Burgh. The Irish were so banded together and so wheedled by William Crasus that they could not be recalled from their conspiracy. The King of Connaught had become heedless of the king's mandates. Theobald Walter had so misconducted himself in regard to the king that, though he had married the justiciary's daughter, he would if it were the king's will deprive him of all his land. So long as the justiciary's life should be prolonged the king need not fear the wickedness or craft of his Irish enemies or others. All these he, Geoffrey, should root out (1443). Geoffrey de Marisco continued justiciary till the beginning of 1228, when he expressed a wish that some other person should be appointed (1572); and accordingly on the 13th of February in that year the office was committed to Richard de Burgh (1571 and 1573). The sum of 500*l.* a year was granted to Richard as his salary (1577). Among the mandates given to him as justiciary are some very remarkable ones. Richard de Burgh continued in office till the 15th of June 1232, when Hubert de Burgh, justiciary of England, was appointed for life justiciary of Ireland, with power to name a deputy (1955, 1957, and 1964). It appears from the document referred to in the last No. that Richard de Burgh acted as Hubert's deputy. Hubert, however, did not long continue justiciary of Ireland, for on August 25, 1232, he was ordered to quit England within 15 days (1974). On ceasing to be justiciary Richard de Burgh did not readily deliver up his custody of the king's castles, though several times ordered to do so (2003, 2008, and 2009). In the first of these the king commands him for the third time by virtue of his oath and homage to deliver up that custody. If he acted otherwise he should incur perpetual infamy. In No. 2012 the king mentions Richard's trespasses against him; in No. 2032 the justiciary is ordered to labour to recover the castle of Milloc if Richard would not surrender it; and in No. 2039 the king, as already stated, commanded Fedhlim, son of the late King of Connaught, to take it and then to come to the king. In No. 1977 we have the appointment of Maurice Fitz Gerald as justiciary of Ireland, September 2, 1232, with the form of oath administered to him as such. The appointment is repeated in No. 1978, and the next No. contains an order for payment to him of 500 marks a year for his maintenance (1979). A reference to the index will show that the mandates given to Maurice Fitz Gerald as justiciary are of great number and importance. Having continued in office for upwards of 13 years Maurice, about November 1245, surrendered it (2785). He appears to have fallen into disgrace with the king, but the latter pardoned him, July 2 and August 8, 1248, and released to him all receipts, accounts, complaints, and demands of the time when he was justiciary. If Maurice held any lands which belonged of right to the king he should be tried thereupon according to law of Ireland without any rancour on the king's part. An inquisition should be held by the justiciary as to the killing of the king's Irishmen in Anglesey when the king was at Gannoc, in order that the king might inflict due vengeance on the guilty. For this release Maurice should give a fine of 500 marks (2952 and 2962). In No. 2963 we have letters of protection for Maurice gone on the king's service to Gascony. On November 4, 1245, John Fitz Geoffrey was appointed justiciary (2785), and continued so during the remainder of the period comprised in this volume.

As to documents relating to the government of Ireland, we have first the grant, already mentioned, made in the commencement of the reign of Henry III. In it the king commands the fealty which his subjects in Ireland have manifested to his father and will manifest to himself, and in token thereof, grants that they and their heirs may enjoy for ever the liberties conferred by his father and himself in England (759); Nos. 1390 and 2850 contain ordinances for the observance in Ireland of the laws and customs of England, as King John when last in the former country ordained; and in No. 1602, dated May 8, 1228, the justiciary is commanded to cause all the archbishops, bishops, abbots, earls, barons, knights, and free tenants, to come before him; to cause to be publicly read to them the charter of King John, which the magnates of Ireland swore to obey, touching the observance in that country of English laws and customs; to enjoin them to keep those laws, and to cause the same to be proclaimed throughout Ireland. We next have a mandate to the justiciary to make such a provision regarding the king's uninhabited cantreds as may best conduce to the king's honour and advantage (1852); the justiciary is commanded to take into the king's hand the lands of those of the king's household in Ireland, who receive from the king an annual fee, but would not come to his service to preserve the peace (1915);

the king wills, Jan. 25, 1234-5, that England and Ireland be common to each other, and that his men of both countries trade hither and thither for the profit and improvement of the latter (2242); the king commands, June 1244, that proclamation be made throughout all cities and vills in Ireland for uniformity of weights and measures; the model to be taken from the weights and measures used in Dublin (2713); the king notifies his will to the seneschal of Leinster, June 18, 1246, that there be in Ireland one justiciary, one treasurer, one chancellor, and that writs shall issue under the king's seal borne by the latter; that there be one Exchequer sitting in Dublin, at which both the seneschal and the sheriffs under him shall answer; the seneschal shall hold no assizes, but allow the king's writs to run through his bailiwick, and the king's justices to take their eyre as they were wont to do before the late Earls Marshall usurped to themselves royal liberties (2836); the king notifies, July 28, 1248, that he sends under his seal to the barons of Ireland particulars of the liberties which he is prepared to grant to them, commanding the justiciary to ascertain their views, and let the king know what they are prepared to do on their side to obtain those liberties (2956); June 11, 1250, mandate to the Archbishop of Dublin, Maurice Fitz Gerald, and others, to counsel the king whether it is better to settle and cultivate the king's waste lands of Ireland, or to let them to the men of Ireland (3061).

In regard to these ordinances or mandates made upwards of 600 years ago, we may be permitted to remark that some of them seem not unworthy of the wise and beneficent rule of the successor of King Henry III. now on the throne, Her most gracious Majesty Queen Victoria.

Of documents relating to legal matters, we have the following among others:—Feb. 21, 1217-18, the king commands the justiciary of Ireland to cause a record of the plaint before him at Dublin, between Eva de Burmingham, wife of the justiciary, complainant, and Reginald Talbot, defendant, touching four carucates of land in Dalkey, to be brought with this writ before the king (817); April 18, 1218, William Earl of Pembroke having shown to the king that Albin Bishop of Ferns had sued him touching his lay fee, which the king is bound to warrant to him when he reaches his age, the king prohibits the Archbishops of Dublin and Tuam and the Bishop of Clogher from holding this plea while the king is under age (823); April 20, same year, if the Archbishops of Dublin and Tuam and the Bishop of Clogher held pleas in the ecclesiastical court touching the lay fee of William Earl Marshall in Leinster, and the Bishop of Ferns prosecuted this plea, the justiciary shall bind over the first-named parties to show why they have held, and the Bishop of Ferns why he has prosecuted this plea (825); March 8, 1220-1, the practice in Ireland regarding justices itinerant differing from that in England, the king and his council ordain that to the sole justice itinerant in Ireland, two be added (985); mandate to the justiciary that pleas of bounds in Ireland be held and framed as in England. The laws of Ireland and England are and ought to be the same (1033). Limitation in writs of Mort d'Ancestor in Ireland to be changed to that in England (1042); Dec. 10, 1226, mandate to the barons, knights, and free tenants of Leinster regarding the law of tenant by the courtesy in Ireland (1458); October 28, 1233, pleas shall not be held in the ecclesiastical court in Ireland, touching advowsons, lay fees, or chattels not connected with testamentary or matrimonial matters (2069); mandate that the writ de Divisis faciendis shall run in Ireland as in England (2232); Aug. 30, 1236, English law and custom regarding coparceners shall be proclaimed and maintained in Ireland (2356); the king commands the justiciary to cause changes in regard to writs of course to be made and proclaimed throughout Ireland. The same laws should prevail in that country as in England (2379).

The first intimation which we have of Hugh de Lacy's intention to wage war against the king is contained in No. 1110, dated June 4, 1223. Under that date the king writes to the Archbishop of Dublin, then justiciary, that the king had offered to commit for five years to Walter de Lacy and others the land which Hugh demanded to have restored to him, but as those persons were unwilling to incur the obligation, nothing was done. Hugh, as the king had heard, was plotting to invade Ireland, wherefore the justiciary is commanded to provide against the attack. Sends the pope's letters of excommunication against Hugh and his accomplices if they invade that land. We have then a letter from Kathal King, of Connaught, to the king; it is undated, but the Editor has assigned to it the date of about March 1224. Hugh de Lacy, says Kathal, enemy of the king, the king's father, and Kathal, who was expelled from Ireland by King John, has come to that country to disturb it. Kathal remains firm in his fidelity to the king, but the closer he adheres to the king's service, the more he is harrassed by those who pretend fealty to the king, and shamefully fail against his enemy; so that between Hugh de Lacy on the one hand, and those who pretend to be faithful on the other, Kathal is placed in great difficulty. Wherefore, unless it is better that the peace of Ireland should be subverted by this disturber, Kathal prays the king to send a force thither to restrain Hugh's insolence (1174); we have then a mandate dated March 30, 1224, that Walter de Lacy have the hall, houses, and chambers in the castle of Trim to dwell in while he is fighting the enemies of the king and of himself (1176); next follows a letter of Joan, Queen of Scotland, to Henry III., her brother, telling him that she had been grieved to hear of the trouble which Hugh de Lacy had caused to the king and his subjects in Ireland; the war would soon be at an end; the King of Scotland did not wish his soldiers to go to Ireland to injure the king; any who did so should be punished (1179). We have then an agreement, dated about March in the same year, made between the king and Walter de Lacy, whereby the latter undertook to go to Ireland, and with the king's force to fight his enemies (1180); then follows another letter from Kathal (1184); we have next the appointment on May 2 in the same year of William Earl of Pembroke as justiciary (1185); same date, power is given to him to receive into the king's peace all those, excepting Hugh de Lacy, who will come to it within 40 days after his arrival in Ireland (1186); same date, he is to take sureties from such of the king's adherents as he does not confide in (1187); and in Nos. 1202 and 1203 we have two letters from the earl himself. In the second of these, dated August 5, 1224, he gives a spirited account of his arrival in Ireland, and of his proceedings against the enemy, which were attended with immediate and signal success. How truly did the Queen of Scotland write that the war would soon be at an end; the earl came, saw, and conquered. It will be seen that he was materially aided by the assistance of O'Reilly, an Irishman, powerful in those parts, who besieged and assisted in taking the castle called Cronoc O'Reilly. The earl appears also to have been aided by the Earl of Athol and his brother. On the conclusion of peace they both wrote to the king asking confirmation of the lands given to them by King John (1218 and 1219.) To this period apparently belongs the curious inventory in

No. 1227, hereafter noticed, of the king's stores found in the castles of Athlone, Limerick, and Dublin. There is mention of the pledges for Hugh de Lacy.

That the king intended to visit Ireland we have several proofs in the documents abstracted in this volume. Preparations were actually made for the purpose. No. 2046 contains a mandate, dated July 18, 1233, to Henry de Hastings to be at Gloucester with three knights in the Quinzaine of the Assumption prepared to go with the king to Ireland; July 22, same year, the sheriff of Kent is with others commanded to cause to be seized all ships capable of carrying 16 horses, and to take security from them that they be at Ilfracombe at the same date, prepared to go on the king's service; a similar mandate to John de Sandwich and seven other English sheriffs (2048); August 4, same year, the king prays Robert de Berkeley to permit the sheriff of Gloucester to make hurdles in his woods for the king's passage to Ireland; similar letters to six other persons (2049); August 7, same year, mandate to the sheriff of York to cause to be proclaimed that all those who hold of the king in capite shall be at Gloucester in the Quinzaine of the Assumption prepared with horses and arms to cross over with the king into Ireland; similar letters to all the sheriffs of England (2052); same date, mandate to the sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk to cause the ships ordered to be arrested to come to Milford in place of Ilfracombe, in order to cross over with the king; they could be more readily equipped at the former port; similar letters to seven other sheriffs (2053); same date, mandate to the barons of Sandwich to come to Milford in the Quinzaine of the Assumption in well equipped ships to cross with the king into Ireland; similar letters to the barons of Dover, Hythe, and Romney (2054); three weeks afterwards, however, on August 28 in the same year, the king intimated that he had changed his purpose and ordered the sheriffs to set the ships free (2058); No. 2059 countermands the order for hurdles and bridges. That the king still continued to entertain the project of proceeding to Ireland appears from various subsequent documents. In No. 2410, dated October 5, 1237, the king writes to the justiciary that he had commanded him to come to England to certify how the king could most conveniently go to Ireland in person; whether with or without provisions, and with a small or a great force. In No. 2438, dated March 23 following, the king writes to the Treasurer of Ireland that matters having lately arisen requiring his attention in England he could not go to Ireland. In No. 2495, dated September 18, 1240, the king refers to his approaching arrival in Dublin; in the following number dated about the 22nd of the same month he states that it was his firm purpose to go to Ireland after the ensuing Easter, and commands the justiciary to purchase 400 hogsheads of wine to be placed in his manors and castles; to provide corn, provisions, and other articles he required on his arrival, and to repair and improve his houses where necessary (2496). We have, however, no proof that the king went to Ireland after Easter 1241. But in No. 2612, dated August 24, 1243, the hall at the Castle of Dublin is commanded to be completed by the king's arrival; and on October 21, 1245, Fedhlim, son of the King of Connaught, had letters of protection till the king went to Ireland (2778).

We now come to the war brought in Ireland against the king by Richard Marshall, third Earl of Pembroke. On the death, about April 1231, of William Earl of Pembroke, who played so distinguished a part in Hugh de Lacy's war, the king, as was usual in such cases, caused his lands in Ireland to be seized until Richard his brother and heir came and did homage. The latter was a liegeman of the King of France, the king's chief enemy as he is called (1892). By No. 1905, however, we find that on August 8, 1231, Earl Richard rendered homage to the king, and the justiciary was then commanded to give seisin to him of all Earl William's lands and castles in Ireland. By No. 1950 dated June 8, 1232, we learn that the earl had named certain villis and lands therein mentioned for the dower in Ireland of Alienor Countess of Pembroke, widow of Earl William, and the king's sister (1950). On March 27, 1234, the king writes to the mayor and citizens of Dublin thanking them for their information regarding the arrival in Ireland of Earl Richard. The magnates had been convened regarding this matter, and the king would communicate what should be done when they met (2099). We have nothing further about the war until May 19, 1234, when Maurice Fitz Gerald, then justiciary, is commanded safely to keep the lands in Ireland of Richard late Earl of Pembroke, and to accept no ransom for any knight taken with him (2111). Earl Richard died in the interval between the last two dates. Richard de Burgh having sided with the king in this war, by letters of the last-mentioned date the king thanks him for his defence of Ireland and his strenuous resistance to the earl (2112). Six days afterwards the king pardons Gilbert Marshall, brother and heir of Earl Richard, receives him into favour, and restores all his hereditary possessions in England, Ireland, and Wales. The king wills that by this act of grace there be no further dissension between Gilbert and the magnates of Ireland and England by reason of the death of Earl Richard, his brother (2120). This pardon is repeated in Nos. 2151 and 2175. In No. 2153 the justiciary is commanded to inquire in presence of the Archbishop of Dublin or his bailiffs what loss the archbishop suffered during Earl Richard's war; what money and jewels, &c. were taken in the king's name in the church of Dublin and other churches and monasteries in the province, &c. From No. 2168 it appears that a treaty of peace was made between Gilbert Earl of Pembroke, his brothers, the magnates, and the king's subjects of Ireland. On September 26, 1234, the king thanks the earls, barons, knights, and his subjects in Ireland, for their services in the war, and prays that they will assist the justiciary in administering the king's affairs (2174); on the following day he commands the justiciary to cause to be inquired what knights and others were against the king in the war; when certified thereupon he shall take fines for transgressions, cause the fines to be inrolled, and send one of the rolls to the king (2190); four days later the justiciary is directed to repay to the citizens of Dublin 416*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.* which they had lent to him to carry on the war (2211), and on the 22nd of November following the king notifies that the ransoms of those who were taken in the war of Kildare had been settled by the council of the king's barons on the arrival in England of Maurice Fitz Gerald (2227). It appears from No. 2284 that Gilbert Earl of Pembroke subsequently sought to invalidate by authority of the Pope the peace made between the king and him. On the death of Gilbert about June 1241, Walter his brother became Earl of Pembroke, but dying shortly afterwards was succeeded by Anselm his brother, who though not named in these pages as earl was undoubtedly entitled to be so. We have thus an instance, a rare one in the peerage, of five brothers succeeding each other in an earldom. On Anselm's death the great family of the Marshalls became extinct in the male line, and their large possessions in Ireland were divided among co-heiresses.

Proofs of this will be found by a reference to the index in this and the subsequent volume.

As to the king's expedition to Scotland in 1244 the first mention which we have of it is in the king's letters dated June 11 in that year (2679), whereby the king notifies that the service which he exacted from the magnates and his subjects of Ireland of joining his expedition against the King of Scots was rendered of their free will and should not be turned into a precedent; the king would cause to be restored to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary, all the booty which he should devote to the maintenance of the king's army in Ireland; the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer should cause to be allowed in their farm to the men of Dublin, Drogheda, Waterford, and Cork whatever they might advance for the king's army. Same date, mandate to the mayor and men of Dublin to purchase for the king's expedition to Scotland 500 crannocks of wheat; the cost shall be allowed to them in the farm of their vill; they shall retain in their port all ships capable of carrying 40 men and send them to Carlingford to transport the king's army of Ireland whither the justiciary shall lead it; the bailiffs and men of Cork shall purchase 200 crannocks of wheat, the bailiffs and men of Waterford 500 crannocks, the bailiffs and provosts of Drogheda 300 crannocks of wheat and 300 of dry oatmeal; and all those vills are to retain ships as above (2687). Mandate, June 13 following, to the seneschal of Meath to cause to be retained all the wines, hides, wool, cloth, and iron which he can find at the fair of Trim, together with 500 crannocks of wheat and 500 of dry oats, and to cause them to be delivered at Drogheda to the justiciary as supplies for the king's expedition (2696). On July 7 following the king writes to Donald, King of Tirconnell, to give him aid by joining in person, and with a force, the justiciary of Ireland. Letters on the same subject to Felim son of the late king O'Reilly, O'Hanlon, Brian O'Neill, king of Kinel-Owen, and 17 other Irishmen. But their services were not required, Alexander, King of the Scots, having made peace, as appears from letters which follow in the entry, directed to Gerald de Prendegast and others, and to all the Irishmen above named (2716).

Then follows the king's expedition to Wales. On January 10, 1244-5, the king prays the justiciary, the magnates, and his subjects of Ireland to join him in revenging the treachery of Llewellyn, Prince of North Wales. The justiciary shall provide by the ensuing summer, wine, corn, and hogs for the maintenance of the king's army, and shall certify what provisions and forces he can send to aid the expedition. The king wishes Ireland to share in his conquest (2733). August 29, 1245, the king commands the men of Dublin to send to him to Gannoc all the provisions they can collect, with the merchants of those provisions to whom the king will cause good payment to be made. Similar letters to the men of Waterford, Drogheda, Limerick, Cork, and Carrickfergus. Mandate to the justiciary to raise on loan 500 marks to purchase corn and flour to be sent to the king. He shall also cause to come as many wine and provision merchants, &c. as he can. Letters to all provision merchants in Ireland to come to the army with provisions; they shall be well paid (2768). October 21 in the same year, the treasurer and chamberlain of Dublin are commanded to cause 3,000 foot soldiers who came from Ireland with the justiciary to the king's service at Gannoc to have their pay of 2*d.* a day for 10 days (2777).

As to the Crusades, the following documents relate to steps taken to promote them in Ireland. About the end of June 1245, we have a licence to John de Frussyn or Frusinon, clerk, envoy of the Pope, to cross over to Ireland to collect money in aid of the Holy Land (2757). On June 16, 1250, the King prays the Archbishop of Dublin to have the cause of the Crusades preached throughout Ireland; similar letters to the Archbishop of Cashel, the Archbishop of Armagh, the Prior of the Dominicans, and the Minister of the Franciscans, provincials of Ireland (3067). November 9, 1250, the King prays the Archbishop of Dublin not to prevent Stephen Longespée, the king's cousin and a crusader, who proposed to cross over sumptuously in aid of the Holy Land, from collecting money in Leinster for redemption of the vows of crusaders (3088). March 18, 1250-1, the king prays the Archbishop of Dublin and John de Frusinon, his colleague, to diligently execute the king's business regarding the collection for three years before the king's passage of the tenth for the Holy Land (3115).

As to subsidies and aids in Ireland, we have several documents relating to them. On November 10, 1217, about a year after his accession, the king commands the justiciary of Ireland that, with Henry Archbishop of Dublin, he impose an aid on his cities, burghs, and demesnes; that they demand an aid from the kings of Connaught and Thomond, from the other kings of Ireland, and the barons and knights who hold of the king in capite (810). Same date, the king appeals on this subject to the barons and knights who hold of him in Ireland (812). The second subsidy or aid was imposed about three years after the first. On September 18, 1220, the king writes to the knights, free tenants, and others of his demesne lands in Ireland, that he is indebted to the Pope, Queen Berengaria, the Lord Louis, the Viscount de Thouars, and others; and therefore prays that they make an efficient aid to him (965). In regard to a clerical subsidy, we have two bulls of Pope Honorius III., bearing date January 29, 1225-6 (Nos. 1348 and 1349). The first is addressed to the Archbishop of Dublin; the second to the archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, and rectors of churches, &c. in Ireland. Ecclesiastical liberty, says his Holiness, is not injured but defended when aid is given to its protector in time of need. Has commanded the clergy of England to yield to the king a subsidy, and now commands the Irish clergy to do the like. The Pope then gives directions for collecting the money. On December 10, 1226, the king writes to the four archbishops of Ireland respecting this subsidy, the object of which was to enable the king to seize the opportunity of recovering his rights offered by the death of the King of France. This subsidy amounted to a 16th on benefices, and the king protests that it shall not cause prejudice to the clergy or their possessions, and that it shall not be drawn into a precedent (1459). Similar letters dated December 21, 1226, to the abbots, priors, prelates, and rectors of churches in Ireland (1464). From Nos. 1549, 1612, and 1699, it appears that this subsidy had not been collected up to June 25, 1229. On November 5, in the last-mentioned year, the king prays the abbots of the Cistercian order in Ireland to aid him with a liberal subsidy in place of the 16th demanded from the clergy in that country, and at the same time commands the justiciary to assess a toll on the tenants of the king's demesne lands (1755). In regard to the lay and clerical subsidy or aid about the beginning of November, 1236, the king writes that being indebted in a large sum of money to the Emperor by the marriage of his sister Isabella, and also to the Pope, his English subjects had paid him an aid. Prays the archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, earls, barons, knights, and free tenants in Ireland, to confer a like favour on him. The king also writes to men in Irish counties, burghs, and demesnes regarding a toll, and likewise prays succour from Walter de Lacy and the barons of Ireland (2365). There was another clerical subsidy in 1243. On the 3rd of June in that year, the king thanks the archbishop of Dublin, his suffragans, and the clergy in his province for granting him a subsidy to continue his war in parts beyond the sea, and prays that they will liberally aid him. Similar letters to the archbishops of Ireland, their suffragans, and clergy (2622). It would thus appear that during the portion of the reign of Henry III. comprised in this volume, there were three lay, at least two clerical and one both clerical and lay, subsidies, or aids imposed in Ireland.

In relation to monasteries and religious houses we have several interesting documents. There is first the petition dated in or about 1224, of Reginald Bishop of Connor, to the king, regarding the house of St. Mary of Carrickfergus, which by extortion and malice is, he says, reduced to such poverty that it can with difficulty maintain three canons. The king's enemies had despoiled the abbot of all his moveables, because he had faithfully adhered to the king in the war (that of Hugh de Lacy no doubt), and placed such stores as he could in the castle of Carrickfergus (1225). August 24, 1227, grant to the abbot and monks of Mellifont of a weekly fair at their vill of Callan (1550); September 5, same year, the abbot of St. Thomas, Dublin, having requested the king to lay the first stone of a new church which he proposed building, the king, as he cannot be present, commands the justiciary to supply his place (1553); January 27, 1228-9, the king grants during pleasure to the prior of the Holy Trinity, Dublin [Christ's Church], 20s. of the king's escheats in lieu of 40s. rent, which the prior says he lost by the fortification of the castle of Dublin (1672); licence for the convent of St. Thomas without Dublin, vacant by the resignation of A., late abbot, to elect an abbot, and grant that the elect of Dublin may give the royal assent; this grant shall not form a precedent (1797). October 12, 1232, letters of protection for the friars of the Cistercian order about to go to Ireland to visit and correct that order. The justiciary is directed to give the friars aid in taming "the mad pride and the proud madness" of those who rebel against the reformation of the order (1992). Same date, the king confirms to the Abbey of Dunbrody the order of the abbot and chapter general of the Cistercian order, reducing the Abbey of Glinewadam, on account of its poverty, to a grange of Dunbrody (1993). January 26, 1232-3, mandate for an inquisition whether the abbots of Boyle were seised of a rent of 25 bushels of barley of the gift of Roderic, formerly King of Connaught, and whether Richard de Burgh, when justiciary, disseised them thereof (2006). Mandate to the mayor and citizens of Dublin not to take customs for the corn and victuals of the abbot and canons of St. Thomas, Dublin (2137). September 30, 1234, inspeximus and confirmation of a charter of grant made by Margaret, daughter of Richard Gillemichelle, to the abbey and nuns at Hogges, near Dublin (2210). The king made a fine of 100 marks with the abbot and monks of Mellifont for 600 cows and 40 marks received on loan from them to maintain the war against Hugh de Lacy (2398). April 5, 1240, inspeximus and confirmation of charter of King John when Lord of Ireland, granting Balumpurt in frankalmoign to A., abbess of all Ireland, and the nun of St. Mary, of Killeecheen [de Kylkelclense] (2483). June 10, 1240, further grant to the abbess and nuns of the same convent (2485). May, 1243, the king commands the men of Dublin to allow the abbot and monks of St. Mary, Dublin, to have boats on the Liffey, if such a grant had been made to them, and to enjoy the liberties they had hitherto possessed (2620). June 3, 1248, mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to assign to the abbot and monks of St. Mary, near Dublin, land or an annual rent of 10 marks, as compensation for the injury done to them by the erection of the king's mills near the castle of Dublin (2941). About January, 1250-1, mandate to the mayor and bailiffs of Bristol to deliver to the abbot and canons of St. Thomas, Dublin, the stone which the latter had caused to be collected at Bristol to construct their church, and which the bailiffs had caused to be arrested to repair the king's castle of Bristol (3107). Soon after May 28, 1251, charter of Robert, prior of St. Patrick's, in Down, and certain abbots notifying that it had been found at a visitation that Michael, Abbot of Bangor, had been guilty of excesses requiring his deposition. The Bishop of Down thereupon pronounced sentence of removal (3150).

We now come to documents relating to municipalities. April 12, 1228, grant to the men of Drogheda of customs to enable them to build their bridge (1582); June 15, 18, and July 5, 1229, three inspeximus grants, and four original grants to the citizens and burgesses of Dublin of liberties and franchises (1693, 1694, 1695, 1696, 1697, 1698, and 1703); September 20, 1229, grant to the burgesses of Drogheda towards Uriel of liberties and franchises (1733); April 29, 1230, the king for the burning of the city of Dublin and the poverty of its inhabitants, grants to its citizens that on this occasion they be taxed at 200 marks (1816); June 16, 1232, grant to the citizens of Waterford of liberties and franchises (1958); June 17, same year, grant in feefarm to the men of Waterford of the king's city of Waterford, rendering 100 marks a year (1960); October 28, 1233, grant for three years to the mayor and men of Dublin of customs to enable them to inclose their city (2068); June 7, 1234, a similar grant to the citizens of Waterford (2133); June 14, same year, a similar grant to the burgesses of Drogheda (2135); January 2, 1241-2, grant to the citizens of Cork of liberties and franchises (2552); April 25, 1243, further grant for three years to the citizens of Waterford of customs to enable them to inclose their city (2613); same date, a further similar grant to the men of Drogheda (2614); June 16, 1247, grant to the burgesses of Drogheda in Meath of liberties and franchises (2881); May 30, 1250, grant for three years to the citizens of Dublin of aids to enable them to inclose their city (3057).

In regard to the Chancery we have, on September 28, 1232, a grant for life to Ralph Bishop of Chichester, Chancellor of England, of the Chancery of Ireland; assignment of Geoffrey de Turville as his deputy; the latter to have the seal with which the affairs of the king and of Ireland are transacted, &c. (1988); May 4, 1233, and May 21, 1234, grants to the same bishop of the Chancery of Ireland for life (2033 and 2116); Robert Luttrell or Luttrell, treasurer of St. Patrick's, Dublin, subsequently the bishop's deputy (2254); November 18, 1245, styled Chancellor of Ireland (2796); April 20, 1246, Robert Luttrell is commanded to deliver the king's Irish seal to the justiciary who is to commit it to Geoffrey Wuleward (2824); July 9, 1249, the king commits to Ralph of Norwich the Chancery of Ireland (2998), and four days afterwards grants to him 60 marks a year so long as he shall be in office (3000).

As to the Mint, that one existed in Ireland at an early date we have proof in a document of February 1, 1214-15, wherein the Archbishop of Dublin is directed to audit the account of its keeper (529); in No. 1660 there is a curious account of the pleas and profits of that Mint. The record is undated, but as there is mention of the name of Luke Archbishop of Dublin it must be of the time of that prelate, viz. 1228-55, which date the Editor has given to it. There is also mention in this document of Robert de Braham, sheriff of Kilkenny; July 27, 1247, grant for seven years to Richard Earl of Cornwall, the king's brother, of half the profit of coining new money in England, Ireland, and Wales; the king will cause the ancient and approved laws and customs relating to the Mint to be observed during that term (2887 and 2888). There were subsequently further similar grants to the Earl of Cornwall for 12 years (2926 and 3129). On July 8, 1251, the king acknowledges to have received on loan from the Earl of Cornwall 2,000 marks to make new money and maintain the Mint in Ireland (3170); and in No. 3201 we have an account of expenses incurred from 1251-52 in the Mint of Ireland.

As to inquisitions, including extents, there are in this volume abstracts of some interesting ones. The first, dated July 5, 1245, was taken apparently at the instance of Donatus Bishop of Killaloe. It finds that the lands of Roscrea had been alienated from that see in consequence of Bishop Cornelius O'Henry having in the time of King John granted permission to the king's justiciary and army to fortify a moat and wooden tower in the war against Murchereath Mac Bren (2760). In No. 2970, taken about October or November 1248, we have an extent of a moiety of land which belonged to Walter de Ridelsford in the vale of Dublin. No. 3186 refers to an inquisition regarding the manor of Ballymadun, finding the names of occupiers, the land held by them, the rent paid, and the value by extent. In No. 3203, taken between October 8, 1251, and March 17, 1251-52, we have an abstract of an inquisition as to the lands, apparently in Cork, of Gerard de Prendegast, and finding at great length the names of the tenants, the land they held, the services or rents rendered by them, and other particulars, among which we have some valuable genealogical information. There is several times mention of lands held by the Irish, of rent paid by them, and of the value of their work, &c. No. 3204 refers to a further inquisition as to lands in Wexford of the same Gerard. The two last are evidently inquisitions, post mortem, though the jury does not find the date of the tenant's death.

Grants of Irish lands are by no means so numerous in the reign of Henry III. as in the preceding reign. On the other hand grants of fairs and markets, and of free chases and warrens, especially the former, frequently occur. Of grants of lands we have the following among others:—To Thomas Fitz Adam of the land of Chapelized and Kilsaltham (959); to John de St. John of the lands of Drummenac and Terenure, and of a lease of the king's manor of Newcastle (998); to Henry de Audley of the vill of Dunleer, of the gift of Hugh de Lacy, &c. (1505); to Ralph de Troubleville of the manor of Ballymadun (1508); to John d'Evreux of lands in Decies therein fully described (1680); to William Fitz Wido, Dean of St. Patrick's, of the king's manor of Esker (1763); to Geoffrey de St. Amand of four carucates of land called le Ryn, formerly belonging to Magorman (Mac Gorman or O'Gorman), an Irishman (1772); confirmation of the gift which David Fitz William, Baron of Naas, made to Maurice Fitz William, his brother, of land in the cantred of Wicklow (2169); to Ralph Pel de Lu of the land of Invre and Dumnal' of the gift of Hugh de Lacy, late Earl of Ulster (2771); to Robert de Muscegros of the cantred of Traddery in Thomond (2920); to Alexander de Tunderlegh of Cumeth, Atfeyth, Gilmelash, and Assecoly in Tyrnabroys or Thirneborhys (3174).

Of grants of markets and fairs we have the following among others:—To John Bishop of Ferns, in Senebod or Senebald (1306); Nicholas de Verdun, in Clonmore and Dundalk (1387 and 1829); Nicholas le Petit, in Dunboyne (1389); Geoffrey de Mariseis, justiciary of Ireland, in his manors of Adare and Anya [Aney or Knockaney] (1415); John Bishop of Ferns, in Ferns, Iscardy, and Senebald (1429); Hugh de Lacy, in Rotour [Ratoath], Nobber, and Carlingford (1544); the abbot and monks of Mellifont, in Callan (1550 and 1735); Marian Archbishop of Cashel, in Cashel (1633); the citizens of Dublin, in Dublin (1697); David de Barry, in Buttevant and Carrigtohill (2170 and 2183); Maurice Fitzgerald, in Youghal and Gren (2182); Richard de Burgh, in Tybract', Gallys, Castle Cuvyn, Clonmel, and Kilfeacle (2422 and 2570); Matthew Fitz Griffin, in Carrick (2573); Christian Bishop of Emly, in Emly (2673); Meyler de Bermingham, in Adneri (2674); Geoffrey Bishop of Ossory, in his manors of Kilkenny, Aghour, Dervagh, Tascoffin, and Clonmore (2780); William Bishop of Leighlin, in Welles (2877); Stephen Longespée and Emelina his wife, in their manor of Tristeldermot [Castle-Dermot] (2948); and to Ebulo de Geneve and Christiana de Mariseis, in Tristedermot (2971).

Of grants of free chases and free warrens the following are specimens:—To Nicholas le Petit, in Dunboyne (1389); Walter de Ridelford, in his manor of Breand Kylka, in the vale of Dublin and Tristelderemod (1394); Maurice Fitz Gerald, in his demesne lands of Ghyrfehray, Ola Deus, Kinalthes, and Kilcalgan (2550); to the same, in Clonmakonekule and Luyne (2680); Geoffrey Bishop of Ossory, in his manors, as mentioned in the grant of fairs above (2780); Maurice Fitzgerald, in Carbery, in the county of Limerick, and Makeylly, in the county of Cork (3137); Roger Waspayl, in his demesne lands of Rathkeale, in the county of Limerick (3164).

Mandates relating to Ireland in this volume are very numerous and diversified. The following are specimens of a few of them:—July 18, 1222, mandate to the men of Dublin, Waterford, Drogheda, Limerick, and other ports, to cause galleys to be made for the defence of Ireland (1049). December, same year, mandate to the earls, barons, and knights of Ireland, not to meet in tournaments; if they tilt, contrary to this prohibition, the king will have recourse to their persons and their lands (1069, 1088, and 1089). May 13, 1227, mandate to Richard de Burgh to cause the cantred of the forest in Connaught, which is a good chase, to be well kept; so that the king, when he goes to those parts, may range through it (1512). September 1241, mandate to the justiciary of Chester to receive six hogsheads of wine sent by the men of Dublin for the king's use, with three for that of the queen, and to convert them to the king's profit as he may deem expedient (2537). June 10, 1244, mandate to the same justiciary to cause 60 does and 20 bucks to be sent to the port of Dalkey, Ireland, to stock the king's park of Glencree (2671). December 29, 1250, mandate that those from Ireland who promised 300*l.* for the head of Carbri Hu O'Melaghlin shall pay that sum to David de Rupe, if he has cut off Carbri's head (3093).

As to castles in Ireland, we have the following among other documents:—In or about 1224, inventory of the king's stores found in the castles of Athlone, Limerick, and Drogheda, a very curious document. These castles appear to have been but ill stored with munition when the inventory was taken, which was probably about the time of Hugh de Lacy's war (1227). July 24, 1225, the king approves of William de Radeclive as chaplain for the chapel of the castle, Dublin (1309). August 7, same year, the king prays the Archbishop of Armagh not to impede the justiciary and his bailiffs in fortifying castles in the king's demesne lands of the archbishop's province (1312). May 14, 1226, Bull of Pope Honorius [III.], commanding the Archbishop of Dublin to admonish detainers of the king's castles in Ireland to surrender them, and if they neglect to do so to compel them by ecclesiastical censure (1375). September 17, 1242, mandate to the treasurer of Ireland to cause glass windows for the chapel of the castle of Dublin to be made, and the work regarding the hall to be finished (2581). April 24, 1243, mandate to the justiciary and treasurer of Ireland, that they cause to be constructed in the castle of Dublin a hall 120 feet in length and 80 feet in breadth, with glazed windows, after the manner of the hall of Canterbury; and that they cause to be made in the gable beyond the dais a round window 30 feet in diameter. They shall also cause to be painted beyond the dais the king and queen sitting with their baronage, and a great portal shall be made at the entrance of the hall. The whole shall be completed by the king's arrival (2612). January 12, 1243-4, the king commands the treasurer of Ireland to cause the work on the hall of the castle of Dublin to be well covered in, so that it may not be injured by weather; and to stop it during the ensuing summer, because the king is much in want of money (2656). June 12, 1244, mandate to the treasurer and chamberlain of Dublin, to cause the hall in the king's castle there to be completed according to the king's directions (2692). October 27, 1245, mandate to Hugh Tyrel, seneschal of Ulster, to cause the king's castle of Carrickfergus and its buildings to be so maintained that they do not fall into ruin (2779). November 18, same year, mandate to the justiciary and treasurer of Ireland to cause the king's hall [in the castle] of Dublin to be completed, and water to be conveyed to it from the conduit of the city of Dublin, so that at the approaching summer the king may find the hall complete. The king prays the men and mayor of Dublin to allow water from the conduit to be so conveyed (2793).

In reference to documents relating to the commerce of Ireland in the time of Henry III., very curious particulars will be found in the grants of customs to municipalities already referred to, and especially in those relating to Dublin and Waterford. Besides these we have the following among others:—November 10, 1218, mandate to the justiciary to cause the course of the Liffey to be rectified, so that ships with merchandise may have ingress to and egress from Dublin (854). September 24, 1220, complaint of the men of Waterford that ships carrying merchandise and wines, which used to unlade at Waterford, unlade elsewhere; mandate that the justiciary compel the ships to unlade at Waterford (968). Same date, complaint of merchants frequenting Ireland, that they are subjected to unjust exactions, and that their goods are taken from them under the name of loan. Mandate that the justiciary no further take anything by way of loan in Dublin or the king's other cities or vills (971). July 29, 1221, the king commands the mayor and men of La Rochelle not to take from the men or merchants of Dublin any customs for their merchandise, save those they were wont to take in the time of King John (1011). April 14, 1223, complaint of merchants of England, Poitou, and Gascony, that when they arrive at Dublin they are not permitted to remain beyond 40 days, unless they unlade their merchandise; the king thereupon commands the justiciary to cause the bailiffs and burgesses of Dublin to desist from this harrassing of or extortion from merchants (1096). May 14, 1223, writ for payment to William Fitz Benedict of 9*l.* 18*s.* for six hogsheads of wine of Anjou bought of Irish merchants for the king's use (1105). May 11, 1225, mandate to Geoffrey de Lucy and the Barons of the Cinque Ports not to impede the persons conveying to London 1,000 crannocks of wheat bought of Earl William Marshall in Ireland by William Renger, Mayor of London, and John Travers (1285).

Of miscellaneous documents we shall merely specify the following:—September, 1240, the king commands the feast of St. Thomas the Martyr to be celebrated in the Saints' church, Dublin, with 800 lighted tapers; and the feast of St. Edward, with the like number of lighted tapers, as well in the Saint's chapel, in the castle of Dublin, as in the churches of St. Thomas and the Holy Trinity; to cause the same number of tapers to be distributed throughout the churches of Dublin on the Parascève; the king's castle to be filled with poor people, who shall be fed, and the king's chamber there to be ceiled; so that God may bless with prosperity the king, the queen, and the king's people (2497). October 28, 1247, the king sends to Ireland 20 serjeants-at-arms, each of them to have 12*d.* a day for pay (2912). April 11, 1249, order for payment out of Irish treasure to John Bone of 22*l.* 14*s.* for 107 large lasts of herrings, whereof 50 were delivered into the king's larder at Westminster, and 57 were deposited in the New Temple, London, to be applied as alms (2986). November 28, 1249, the king grants for two years to Edward his son the issues of Ireland to fortify Gascony; Simon de Montfort, Earl of Leicester, husband of the king's sister, to have all the revenues of Ireland for that purpose during the above term (3021 and 3022).

We here conclude our summary of records mentioned in this volume, having noticed abstracts referring to 22 subjects or topics. These specimens may serve to show the value and variety of some of the records in question, but let it not be supposed that we have thus exhausted the information pointed at in this volume. We have not mentioned several records possessing probably as much interest and importance as any we have noticed. The titles, for instance, of the King, and the Exchequer of Dublin or Ireland, which extend to such length in the index, have not been referred to. There is also much information about various persons and families whom we have either not named or only casually noticed. Such are the de Bernewalls, de Burghs, Fitz Gerald, Tuites, the Marshalls, Earls of Pembroke, and others. The index will show the information contained regarding them. The lineal descendants of some of these persons flourish in Ireland at the present day, rich in wealth and honour in the reign of Queen Victoria as they were in that of King Henry III. As to the native Irish, there are not, it is true, in this volume many documents referring to them besides the interesting ones we have mentioned; but we could scarcely expect to find much information of this kind in the Public Records of England. We must have recourse for it generally to the works on native Irish history made available of late years by the labours of distinguished Irish scholars, and to those given to the public by learned societies in Ireland, such are the Leabhar Na H-Uidhri, the Leabhar Breac, and the Book of Leinster, published or publishing by the Royal Irish Academy.

If we were required to give a short general description of the records abstracted in this volume, we should say that they are authoritative and, with a few exceptions, contemporaneous memorials of acts of the king and his ministers or officers in relation to Ireland, and hence the frequent recurrence of the king's name in these pages. This description must, however, be taken as subject to qualification; there are some records to which it does not appear to apply, but it may serve to show the general importance of the documents abstracted. The utility of these records can scarcely be called in question; they are many of them highly valuable for a twofold purpose, 1st, as regards legal, and, 2ndly, as regards historical evidence. Ancient legal rights in Ireland may in several instances be established by them, while unfounded claims may be disproved. It is in regard to history, however, that their chief utility will probably be found to lie. We have in this volume references to many documents of very great importance to history in Ireland, but which have hitherto, from the circumstances in which they were placed, remained comparatively unknown. In proof of this we need only mention the interesting documents referred to in connexion with Hugh de Lacy's war. In this as in other instances the records tell the tale with a vividness which the cunning hand of the brilliant historian cannot achieve.

A general history that would give us full, unbiassed and authentic information regarding both races in Ireland is still wanted. There is also much to be done regarding what may be called particular history in the same country. The English Monasticon, for instance, consists of eight folio volumes, while the best known Irish one is but a quarto which the learned writer himself in his introduction styles an epitome. Its index is not satisfactory. Such a work does not and cannot worthily represent the numerous and very interesting monasteries which once flourished in Ireland. In regard to topographical history, Ireland is but little better provided for. The county of Leicester, in England, for instance, can boast of an elaborate history of four double volumes, being in fact eight volumes folio; while the Leicestershire of Ireland, the fine county of Kildare, the seat of the war of 1234, with its resident nobility and gentry and their beautiful seats, its ancient families, its ruins of monasteries and castles, its round towers, and other antiquities, its noble plains, and its thriving population, is without anything worthy of the name of a history. Need we add that there are in this, as we have reason to think there will be in the succeeding volumes, references to important and authentic evidence regarding Irish history, both general and particular in all its branches.

The present is, it is believed, the first attempt that has ever been made to compile a Calendar in English of all the instruments and entries relating to Ireland to be found on or among the Public Records of England. The documents here abstracted are not the opinions, fancies, or mistakes of any man; they are realities, they are facts. By section 13 of the Statute 1 & 2 Victoria c. 94. (the Public Record Act) copies of records sealed with the seal of the office are evidence in all courts of justice and in the Houses of Parliament. Nothing can be easier than to obtain copies.

This and the succeeding volumes will, we venture confidently to hope, prove useful as a ready and easy guide to the important, interesting, and useful but little known English Public Records relating to Ireland.

It now only remains for us to express our acknowledgments to gentlemen who have kindly and ably assisted us in the course of our long labours. Of gentlemen officially connected with the Public Record Office we have among others most warmly to thank Mr. Hans Claude Hamilton, Mr. Alfred Kingston, and Mr. Walford D. Selby. We have already expressed our acknowledgments to Mr. W. M. Hennessy of the Public Record Office, Ireland. Of gentlemen not officially connected with the Record Office we have to return our best thanks to Mr. Henry Gay Hewlett and Mr. Stuart Moore.

PERSONS WHO HAVE GIVEN THEIR ATTENTION TO PORTIONS OF PUBLIC RECORDS RELATING TO IRELAND.

Of these the following may be enumerated :—

1. Sir George Carew, afterwards Earl of Totness, President of Munster in the reign of Elizabeth; his excerpts relating to Ireland from the Public Records are printed in the 5th volume of the Carew Papers, p. 333, and following pages.
2. The very distinguished Irish antiquary, Sir James Ware, who, in seeking facts for his history of the Archbishops and Bishops of Ireland, devoted much attention to the Public Records of England, as his constant reference to them proves.
3. William Lynch, F.S.A., an Irish gentleman of great experience in records, who upwards of 40 years ago made extensive researches among the English Rolls to obtain materials for his "View of the Legal Institutions, Hereditary Offices, and Feudal Baronies established in Ireland by Henry II.;" abstracts of several entries on the Pipe Rolls to which he refers are given in the present volume.
4. Rowley Lascelles, a member of the Bar, who in his work, entitled "Liber Munerum Publicorum Hibernia," gives many extracts from and references to English Patent, Close, and other Rolls referring to Ireland.

By order of the justiciary William subsequently came to the castle of Dublin; on his return he and Robert, Roger, Philip, and Henry, when standing on the bridge, saw Warin, Elias, Richard, Thomas, Robert, and another man with a hatchet; they tried to interpose between them and their lord, but he with the hatchet, by command of the others, struck William le Brun, and he fell into the castle dike, dying 3 days afterwards; 2 of the party went down into the dike to help their lord; 2 others raised the hue and cry, and followed until Warin gave refuge to the murderer, and enabled him to escape through a gate which Warin guarded, so that they could not overtake him. On the cry being raised the justiciary came with Ralph Morin, who well knows these facts, and many others also who saw William thus stricken.

... offers to prove that he carrying the hatchet thus struck his lord by command of Warin feloniously and against the peace which they had pledged; and Roger le Brun offers to prove in like manner against Elias, Philip against Richard, and Henry against Thomas, that the wrong-doer so killed their lord as aforesaid.

And Warin defends the charge as one maimed of his leg which was broken, as the knights sent to see him testify; and the others in like manner defend the charge, and offer 60 marks for an inquisition to inquire whether they ever pledged the peace as aforesaid.

Marvels much at what they tell him in their letters, from which it appears that they are about to create a new assise in the K.'s land without the K. - [Soon after July 28.] 408. Statement by the K. regarding William de Breouse. William was indebted to the K. in 5,000 marks for the land of Munster, in Ireland, demised to him, and was further indebted for 5 years of the farm of the city of Limerick. Having removed his chattels in England, which were about to be seized for the debt, order was given to Gerard de Athiis, the K.'s bailiff of Wales, to restrain him in that territory. Whereupon Maud de Haia, his wife,

William Earl Ferrers, his nephew, Adam de Port, his sister's husband, and others came to the K. at Gloucester, and entreated that William might be admitted to the K.'s presence to give satisfaction. William therefore attended the K. at Hereford, gave up his castles of Hay, Brecon, and Radnor, in Wales, to be held by the K. until the debts should be paid, mortgaged all his lands in England for the same purpose, and gave as hostages, William, his son, a son of Reginald de Breouse, and 4 of his tenants sons. He nevertheless attempted with a large force to enter his castles; failing therein he burnt half the town of Leominster, and slew the K.'s balisters, soldiers, and people there. Gerard de Athis, having hereupon raised a force, William fled with his family into Ireland, and was there harboured by Earl William Marshall and Walter and Hugh de Lasci. The latter undertook that William should make satisfaction, and that in case he failed to do so they would no longer harbour or suffer him to stay in Ireland. This promise not being kept, the K. raised an army with purpose to go into that country, and came to Pembroke, on the Irish sea, with that army. Thither came William, and offered 40,000 marks for the K.'s peace; but the K. answered that it was not in his power, but in that of his wife, in Ireland, to perform what he offered; and commanded him to accompany the K. to that country; but he refused to do so. Meanwhile Maud, William's wife, hearing that the K. had arrived in Ireland, fled to Scotland with her sons and family in company of Hugh de Lasci, but she was taken prisoner and brought to the K. by Duncan de Carrie. The K. having left Carrickfergus for England, and taken her in custody with him, she again offered the 40,000 marks, with a penalty of 10,000 more in case of failure in payment. The accord was put in writing and ratified by oath; William subsequently expressed his consent. But when the first day of payment came, Maud stated that she had not the money. The K. therefore commanded that William should be proclaimed from county to county, and in case he came not, that he should be outlawed according to the law and custom of England. Subscribed by William Earl of Salisbury, Godfrey Fitz Peter, Earl of Essex, Saier Earl of Winchester, Richard Earl de Clare, Earl Alberic, Henry Earl of Hereford, William Earl de Ferrariis, and others. * [The initial of the King's name at the top of this transcript in the Black Book, is H., denoting Henry, but the names of the witnesses and other internal evidence, tend to prove that the statement in question is of the reign of King John, to which reign both Dugdale and Hearne agree in assigning it. The transcript in the Chapter House Book above referred to, being headed with the initial and style of King John, no doubt confirms this conclusion.]

448. Declaration by William Marshall, Earl of Pembroke, Meyler Fitz Henry, Roger Pipard, Geoffrey de Mariscis, William le Petit, Nicholas de Verdun, Thomas Bloet, Adam de Hereford, Thomas Fitz Maurice, William Fitz William, Baron of Naas [Nas], Philip de Prendergast, Geoffrey de Canville, Richard de Futipo, Peter de Meset, John Fitz Leo, Thomas Fitz Anthony, Walter de Rideleff, John de Clahull, Roger Waspail, William de Katinton, David de Rupe, Maurice de London, Alexander Fitz Hugh, William de Aencurt, William Fitz Stephen, Adam le Gros, Adam le Bret, and all the magnates of Ireland.

Moved with grief and astonishment they had lately heard that the Pope proposed to absolve the subjects of the K. from their fealty because the K. resisted the injury done to him regarding the matter of the church of Canterbury [super facto Cantuariæ ecclesiæ]. God had given them their Lord to defend them; therefore they ought to defend their liege Lord with all their strength. All that had been done regarding the church of Canterbury had been done against the liberty and dignity of the K. and of the Crown of England. Before the coming of the Normans the Kings of England conferred at their will cathedral churches on many archbishops and bishops, now saints. But after this period the Kings granted that elections should be made, as they have hitherto been made, by assent of the K. Their Lord is faithful to them; they are his liege subjects; they and their forefathers have been nourished, enriched with wealth and honours, and enfeoffed by the K. and his ancestors; the K. had never offended against the constitution or his subjects; and resisted in regard to the church of Canterbury that he might preserve in their integrity the liberty and dignity which the Crown of England has hitherto enjoyed. With the K. they are prepared to live or die; and to the last they will faithfully and inseparably adhere to the K. [Red Book, Exchequer, Q. R., Vol. V. fol. 180.]

- It had pleased the ruler of life and death to remove the K.'s lord and father; the regal obsequies had been celebrated in the church of St. Mary, Worcester; and the magnates of the kingdom had met at Gloucester, where on the feast of Sts. Simon and Jude [Oct. 28], in the church of St. Peter, amid the applause of clergy and people, he had been crowned King of England by Cardinal Gualo, Papal Legate.

- The prelates, earls, and barons had lately met at Bristol and rendered fealty; the K. had granted to them the liberties and free customs which they had previously asked for; and they had returned home rejoicing.

Masters Macrobius and David, canons of Lismore, came before the K. in England, and in the presence of Pandulph, Bishop elect of Norwich, chamberlain of the Pope, and Papal Legate, submitted to the K.'s council that they had elected Robert de Bedford as Bishop of their vacant see, and prayed the K.'s assent; but it was objected that the election was null, as the K.'s dignity required that this election, previous to being sent to the K., ought to have been obtained for several days and confirmed by the Pope, the K.'s licence having been [previously] demanded and granted. The canons therefore renounced the election, submitted to the Council letters of the chapter constituting them proctors in this election, and prayed licence to elect. This being granted they elected the same Master Robert as Bishop. To this election, thus made in proper form from the K. gives his assent, and commands the justiciary to deliver seisin to master Robert or his proctor accordingly. Witness, Pandulph Bishop of Winchester. Westminster.

- June 7. 878. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. Robert Bishop of Waterford having, by mandate of G[], late legate of England, gone to the North to consecrate the Bishop of Carlisle, Master Robert of Bedford, with Masters Macrobius and David, canons of Lismore, came to Pandulph, now legate in England, the K. and his Council, and exhibited letters conferring on those canons power to elect a pastor in the church of Lismore, which they stated was vacant. The K., placing faith in the election of Master Robert so made, gave the royal assent, and ordered him to be put in possession of the goods of the see. The Bishop of Waterford having shortly afterwards returned, submitted to the K. and Council that he and his predecessors had long held the church of Lismore as part of the see of Waterford, and exhibited to the legate and the K.'s Council letters of J[], Cardinal of St. Stephen in the Caelian Mount, formerly legate of Ireland, on the ordination of those sees. He showed that though formerly separate, the sees had been united by the legate, and alleged that no one could thus enter into possession of a see over which he presided by suggesting what was false. The K. now perceiving that he had been deceived by Master Robert as to the vacancy of the church of Lismore, decrees that the Bishop of Waterford be put in possession of the goods of that church, and commands the justiciary of Ireland accordingly. Witness, Hubert de Burgh, justiciary. Westminster. By letters of the latter and of the Bishops of Winchester and Durham, written by authority of the legate.
- Mandate to the Archbishop of Cashel to permit the Bishop of Waterford to hold in peace the bishopric of Lismore.

- June 20. 881. The K. commands Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of Ireland, to cause Philip Marc. to have seisin of the land which belonged to Godfrey Luterell in Cratalauch [? - [About June.] 884. Henry Archbishop of Dublin, Papal Legate, to Hubert de Burgh, justiciary of England. Had spoken to the justiciary about obtaining the service of the land of Walter de Lasce, to fortify a castle to the use of Richard de Tuit in Delvene. As there are no magnates in Ireland who will willingly afford him counsel and aid in doing so, letters to them for that purpose will not avail; wherefore the Archbishop prays the justiciary, in order to obtain for him the above service, to send the often-mentioned letters of the K., which would be of such use in retaining the workmen. Great inconvenience is felt in Ireland by the writ of Mort d'ancestor running after the passage of King Henry from that country. It was resolved in Ireland that when the justiciary went to the K. this inconvenience should be submitted to the latter and his counsellors; but this was not done, the justiciary having hastily left England. Wherefore the Archbishop prays the justiciary to use his influence in order that these writs may run in Ireland from the same period as they run in England, or, if possible, from the coronation of King John. [Royal Letters, No. 212.]
- July 1. 885. Mandate to all knights and free tenants of the see of Waterford, that they do their duty to Robert Bishop of Waterford, notwithstanding the K.'s letters which Master R. de Bedeford obtained

- Aug. 19. 888. Mandate to the justiciary that, notwithstanding the seisin given by King John to Robert Talbot, he cause seisin to be given to William de Brakenberg of his land of Brakenberg, whereof he was disseised because accused of siding in the war with the enemies of King John, although he did not do so. Lincoln. [Close, 3 Hen. III., p. 2, m. 4.]
- Aug. 22. 889. Mandate to the justiciary to give seisin to Philip Mar' [? Marc] of all the lands which belonged to Godfrey Luterel, whose daughter and heir the K. has given in marriage to Philip. [Pat., 3 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 2.]

Mandate that the justiciary cause the Earl to have the prolonged term, in order that meanwhile it may be ascertained whether the ships can touch at Ross without hindrance to Waterford, or not. - [Soon after Aug. 24.] 892. Thomas Fitz Adam to Ralph de Nova Villa [Nevill]. When by order of the K. and of Ralph he had received from the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary, custody of the K.'s forest of Ireland, he requested the latter, in presence of the magnates of that country, to cause the officials of the forest to feed, as they were wont to do in the time of King John, the servants placed in the forest for its custody. The Archbishop answered that the forest and beasts were his, and that he would not allow his men to feed the servants against his liberty and the rights of his church. He also refused to permit the servants to be kept on the K.'s demesne until the K. should grant provision to Thomas for the custody. In order to maintain the K. in possession, Thomas retains the custody at his own expense, until he shall have received the K.'s orders regarding the Archbishop's claim. The case of the Archbishop is this:—King 1219. John, when the Archbishop went to Rome as the K.'s emissary, aided him in obtaining from the Pope that the see of Glendalough in the K.'s forest, should be united to that of Dublin; and the Archbishop maintains that all the forest therein is the right of his see. The Archbishop's men dwelling in the forest allege that King John released the Archbishop from the obligation of feeding the servants because he ordered him to be quit thereof until his return from Rome.

Moreover Thomas objects to any one having the custody on the K.'s behalf of the forest of Des [Decies] without Waterford, because he says that the forest is his by charter of fee farm [Royal Letters, No. 825.]
- [Aug.] 893. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to call Thomas Fitz Adam and John de St. John to the councils of the K. whenever held regarding matters touching the K.; and to temporarily promote them when opportunity occurs. [Close, 3 Hen. III., p. 2, m. 3.]

Had heard that the K. had commanded his justiciary of Ireland to deliver to Leuca, who was the wife of Geoffrey de Canville, all Geoffrey's land in Ireland. Now Geoffrey bought the land which Leuca demands of William de Abbetot, nephew of Philip de Wigorn, 10 or 12 years before he married Leuca, and before the arrival in Ireland of William de Breouse, of whose gift she claims it. Geoffrey made with King John a fine of 200 marks to hold the land in capite, and held it for his life; the K. has had the custody of the land since Geoffrey's decease. [Royal Letters, No. 241.]
- Sept. 21. 897. The K. to Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of Ireland. Richard de Burgh by the K.'s order has come to England, and remains on the K.'s service. Mandate to the same, that for the future all debts and fines be inrolled on the Rolls of the [Irish] Exchequer; that an account thereof be there rendered by counsel of Thomas Fitz Adam and John de St. John and other subjects of the K. competent for the purpose, in order that by the Rolls and their testimony the K. may have better notice of the issues of Ireland; and that the justiciary cause Thomas Fitz Adam and John de St. John to have all escheats falling into the K.'s hands in Ireland; they shall answer therefor where the K. pleases.

Mandate to the same Archbishop to receive the care and custody of Ireland, and to cause the justiciary to perform the K.'s mandate as well in coming to him as inrolling the fines and debts.

Mandate that, having regard to the circumstances touching the situation of the King of Connaught and those touching the K.'s safety, honor, and interest, the justiciary so consider the matter that on his arrival in England he may be able to offer to the K. sound, safe, and salutary advice. The New Temple, London. [Close, 3 Hen. III., p. 2, m. 2.]

[About Sept.]

904. Henry Archbishop of Dublin, Papal Legate, to the K. When the K. had sent his mandate that Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of Ireland, should repair to him in England, and that the custody of that country should meanwhile be committed to the Archbishop, the latter purposed going to the K. himself for various reasons which he had signified to the K. by David, his messenger. R. de Norwich having brought a further mandate that the justiciary should hasten to the K., the latter prepared for his journey, when David, the Archbishop's messenger, brought back the intelligence that the Archbishop's presence in England would be pleasing to the K. The Archbishop will then hasten to the K., as he is very desirous to see him, to confer about his affairs, but chiefly to purge himself from false aspersions. His fidelity having been proved during his lengthened service with King John, a sinister suspicion of this kind ought to be at once removed. Will therefore repair to the K.; but prays the latter to communicate by the bearer his pleasure regarding the matters in question; and to enjoin the justiciary to hasten his departure, and commit the custody of Ireland to another person. Further prays the K. to give credit to what David shall tell him; and sends some secrets which he does not wish to write. [Royal Letters, No. 804.]

Has inspected the charters by which King John gave to Duncan Fitz Gilbert 50 carucates of land in Wulvriceford, Inverth, and Glinam; and to John Fitz Alexander, 5 carucates of land in Maghalin, whereof the justiciary disseised them, believing that they went against King John and the K. in the war, whereas they have faithfully served both. Mandate that seisin be given to them of those lands. Westminster. [Close, 3 Hen. III., p. 2, m. 1.]

- Nov. 7. 912. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. Had commanded him to permit ships to touch at Earl William Marshall's ports de Insula and Ros, unless this proved to the detriment of the K., and of the city of Waterford. The K. has just learnt that the city of Waterford may be much injured if ships with merchandise are further allowed to touch at those ports. Wherefore the K. commands that, until further orders, ships shall as they used to do, diverge to the port of Waterford. Westminster. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 17.]

Winchester. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 16.]
- [About
Dec.] 920. Henry Archbishop of Dublin, Papal Legate, to King Henry III. The Archbishop of Cashel, being about to depart for the Apostolic See, has ordered his province to be placed under an interdict, and Geoffrey de Mariscis, the K.'s justiciary of Ireland, to be excommunicated, unless restitution be made of the new vill of Cashel, taken into the K.'s hand. The Archbishop of Dublin having conferred with the suffragans and officials of the see of Cashel, and the K.'s justiciary and barons, supplicates the K., by the restitution of the vill, to withdraw the Archbishop of Cashel from his purpose of proceeding to the Supreme Pontiff, and so prevent a cause of disturbance. The revenues of the vill do not yield great profit to the K. [Royal Letters, No. 58.]
- [About 1219 or
1220.] 921. Thomas Fitz Adam to Ralph de Nova Villa [Nevill]. Had heard that the K. had by his letters commanded the justiciary of Ireland to deliver to Leuca, who was the wife of Geoffrey de Caunville, her marriage portion out of the land of her late husband in that country. The latter had purchased this land of William de Abbetot, nephew of Philip de Wigorn and by his assent 10 or 12 years before he married Leuca and before W[illiam] de Breouse, of whose gift she claims it in marriage, came to Ireland. Geoffrey made with King John a fine of 200 marks to hold the land in capite, and the K. had the custody of the land after Geoffrey's decease. Warns Ralph not to be too precipitate in satisfying demands of persons from Ireland. If the lady above mentioned obtain her demand, the K. by the charter of William de Breouse acknowledges the title of the heirs of William de Breouse to the land in Munster. [Royal Letters, No. 826.]
- 1219-1220. 922. Northampton:—The burgesses of Northampton render their account; to Ralph de Norwich, clerk, for his expenses in going to Ireland, in part payment of 20 marks which the K. yearly gives to him at his Exchequer, 10 marks, by the K.'s writ. [Pipe, 4 Hen. III., Rot. 2.]
- Jan. 24. 923. The K. to Henry Archbishop of Dublin. Having learnt by his letters that the suffragans and officials of the Archbishop of Cashel were prepared to subject the whole province to an interdict and the justiciary of Ireland to an excommunication, unless the new town of Cashel were restored to that Archbishop; and that having held a conference with the suffragans and officials he had obtained that that vill should by their consent be sequestered into his hand

until the octaves of Easter, in order that matter of discord might be avoided, the K. approves of this act of solicitude on the part of the Archbishop of Dublin, and thanks him. The subjects of the K.'s Council having hereupon held a conference, learnt that that vill had come into the K.'s hands by the finding of a jury of persons of the highest station and most worthy of faith in those parts. The Archbishop of Cashel, though summoned to hear this finding, refused to come. The K. then, being in possession of the vill, prays the Archbishop of Dublin to restore it to the K. at the expiration of the above term by the hands of the justiciary; and offers on the part of himself and his justiciary to exhibit justice to the suffragans and officials according to law. Westminster. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 15 dors.]

Hilary. 924. Respite till the close of Easter for Geoffrey de Mariseis, justiciary of Ireland, touching the demand against him.

Norfolk:—Mandate to the sheriff to respite Geoffrey de Mariseis, justiciary of Ireland, till the octaves of Easter, touching the debts demanded by the Exchequer, and those exacted from him by the Jews within his bailiwick. [Memoranda, Q.R., 4 Hen. III., m. 14.]

[About Jan.] 925. Henry Archbishop of Dublin to the K. Had undergone great labour and expense for the K. and King John, his father. Prays that the K. will command his justiciary of Ireland to refrain from infringing on the possessions and dignities of himself and his church obtained from King Henry II. and King John, and confirmed by their charters. [Royal Letters, No. 57.]

[Soon after the octave of Hilary.] 926. Thomas Fitz Adam to the K. Ireland is in a good state; but the Archbishop of Dublin strives to disinherit the K. of his forest in that country, and subjects Thomas, the keeper thereof, to intolerable interference in regard to it. In the octave of the Epiphany last past, when the justice in Eyre of the forest had come to inquire regarding the K.'s rights there, some foresters shamefully beaten and with tattered garments came to Thomas complaining that the Archbishop's men cutting the K.'s wood in the K.'s forest had risen against them, taken their wages by force, and assaulted them. The same day a malefactor was pointed out to Thomas in the forest on the Archbishop's land, who from the time of King John had spoiled the forest. The persons sent to seek him found him in his house, which having searched in order the better to attach him, they found his bow, with a bloody arrow, a stag's antlers, also bloody, a hide, and some venison. Thomas caused the good men of the K.'s vill in the same forest to be assembled, brought the malefactor before them, and put him in the K.'s prison. On hearing this, the Archbishop sent the Dean of Dublin and three priests to demand the discharge of the man as taken on church land. Thomas refused to discharge him unless the Archbishop would give bail for him. On the same day [Jan. 5] the Archbishop ordered all the priests within and without Dublin to refrain from Divine Service if Thomas remained in the vill. On the next day, the feast of the Epiphany [Jan. 6], two priests came to Thomas demanding that the malefactor be surrendered, otherwise they should excommunicate Thomas. The latter thereupon appealed to the Archbishop; if that were ineffectual, to the 1219-1220.

Pope; and if that did not avail, he asked a respite until he should speak to the justiciary. All this was opposed, and Thomas was excommunicated. The latter having thereupon laid before the Archbishop the grievance and disgrace put upon him, the Archbishop replied that the man ought not to have been taken on his land, even if he were in the forest; and that the land, wood, forest, and beasts were his. Thomas hearing that the Archbishop had brought the question of the K.'s right before his own court, would not discharge the man unless the Archbishop gave bail for him to appear before the K.'s court, or at least before the justiciary at his Eyre; this the Archbishop refused. Thomas not having been absolved, wrote to the justiciary for his directions; the latter directed Thomas not to release the man unless bailed as above. The justiciary also wrote to the Archbishop to recall the sentence; but this did not avail. Thomas is persecuted throughout the land; intercourse with men, and the convenience of towns are denied to him; and he has been prevented attending to carry out an important matter relating to the K., namely, that the latter should have the gift of churches in Connaught, which he never had before; nor could he be present at the assizes in Dublin in the octaves of Hilary. It is thus that the Archbishop promotes the K.'s affairs in Ireland. Some persons have told the Archbishop that the K.'s chief bailiffs, by reason of the K.'s privilege, ought not to be excommunicated without consulting the K.; but the Archbishop answered, that when he had seen the privilege he would believe it. Thomas therefore prays that the K. will procure his absolution from some person other than the Archbishop; and that he will provide good and lawful men in Ireland to execute his business in opposition to the Archbishop, who seeks to disinherit the K. [Royal Letters, No. 827.] *

[About Jan. or Feb.] 927. H[enry] Archbishop of [Dublin], Papal Legate, to Ralph de Nevill, Dean of Lichfield. Although he has striven to do what is good and prevent what is bad regarding the K., yet he hears that he is held suspected by some persons. Having long shown devotion to King John and to the K., the Dean will hold him innocent. Will shortly repair to the K.'s Council in England to prove his innocence. Is not only troubled by this suspicion, but by injuries and oppressions described in his letters to the K. Beseeches the Dean to use his efforts in defence of the church and of ecclesiastical liberty. The Archbishop cannot believe that the K. would wish to impair the great liberties conferred on the church by King John, or to revoke those granted by himself in the flower of his youth. Those liberties are known to and have been as it were approved of by the Pope and his legate, have been confirmed by the impression of the K.'s seal and the oath of his subjects; and are contained in the K.'s charter sent to Ireland. [Shortly before
March 10.]

932. Henry Archbishop of Dublin, Papal Legate, to the K. The lands of his see have of old been free from foresters and other worldly exactions. The ancient liberties of his church are secured by the charters of King John, and if any one dared to infringe those liberties the Archbishop's venerable predecessor by [the penalty of] 7 years interdict [septennis exilii] restored them to their proper state. The K.'s charter lately sent to Ireland confirms those liberties; but T[homas] Fitz Adam, to whom the K. has committed his forest of Ireland, seeks to afforest the Archbishop's land, to introduce new oppressions and exactions, and to seize his men. Thomas has been excommunicated by the Archbishop's archdeacon, but having repented has been absolved. The Archbishop was about to repair to the K.'s presence respecting these matters, when the K.'s messengers arrived. As soon as he shall have consulted the justiciary, who is absent in remote parts, he will, according to the answer of the latter, decide what is for the K.'s benefit. In the meanwhile he prays the K. to direct T[homas] Fitz Adam to cease from his molestation, and farther to give credence to what David, his messenger, shall say on his behalf. Sends some small presents, and will either send or bring larger ones. [Royal Letters, No. 802.]

March 10.

933. The K. to Henry Archbishop of Dublin, Apostolic Legate. The Archbishop has made a grave complaint against Thomas Fitz Adam, keeper of the K.'s forest, that contrary to the ancient liberties of the church, he strives to afforest the Archbishop's lands, inflicts new exactions, seizes and detains his men; for which the Archbishop has visited him with excommunication. The K. prays the Archbishop to be as solicitous in preserving the K.'s right as he wishes the K. to be in guarding the Archbishop's liberties. Has commanded Thomas to desist from troubling the Archbishop with unjust exactions, hoping that when they meet, amends will be made for any 1219-1220.

trespass against either of them. Thanks the Archbishop for his prudence in regard to the election to [the see of] Achonry [Aca-densis], which, as appears from his missive, was not canonically celebrated, the royal licence to elect not having been previously sought; and also thanks him for the jewels he has sent, hoping to have an opportunity of making a due return for the Archbishop's munificence. Westminster. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 14 dors.]

[About 1219-1220.] 934. Ralph de Norwich, the K.'s clerk, to the K. Prays the latter not to give an answer to any messenger from Ireland until the arrival of Richard de Fay, knight of Sir W. de Lasey, whom he sends to certify to the K. and Council regarding many matters. [Royal Letters, No. 836.]

1220. 935. The K.'s citizens of Dublin to the K. After the departure [Soon after March 22.] from Dublin of Ralph de Norwich a controversy arose between the Archbishop of Dublin and the citizens under these circumstances:—Two of the Archbishop's men from the mountains violently assaulted a citizen and the wife of another citizen in the market-place [forum] of Dublin; they were thereupon attached by the provosts; but the Archbishop's bailiffs demanded their discharge, claiming [the privilege of] the Archbishop's court. The citizens thought that this ought not to be, because where an offence is committed, there it ought to be punished; and because neither the Archbishop nor his predecessors had ever deprived the citizens' court of a plea of this kind. When pleas and the hundred were in the hands of King John, his seneschals or bailiffs had jurisdiction in pleas of this nature; and after the K. granted the city in fee farm to them, the citizens exercised that jurisdiction to this day; and they will continue to exercise it. For this reason the citizens have not dared to abate their liberty; they will not and cannot do so without the K.'s mandate. The Archbishop says he has a charter of liberty from King John; but the citizens have never heard of it, nor was such a charter read or carried into execution in Ireland. Lately the Archbishop's bailiffs and the bail not having appeared in court, they were amerced for non-appearance, and the bail for not having the persons bailed in court. At the next hundred they brought into the K.'s court one of the wrong-doers and not the other; for which reason the bail were again amerced. The Archbishop's bailiffs having thereupon complained to Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of Ireland, he sent his sheriff to the citizens' court, ordering that the Archbishop's men should have justice. But they, treating with disdain the citizens' court and the complaint, called upon the citizens by clerics to release the man under pain of excommunication. The citizens demanded respite to certify to the K. or to consult the justiciary, who was then absent in distant parts; this they refused, preferring to excommunicate the citizens. The latter having made every offer within their power, forbade them on behalf of the K. to utter any sentence against the citizens, and against the K.'s dignity in his city. They thereupon interdicted the provost from entering the church, and subsequently excommunicated him; and did the like in regard to the seneschal, and 24 principal men of the council appointed to preserve the laws and liberties of the city. The citizens thereupon pray the K.'s counsel; in upholding his dignity they have entered on a great contest. [Royal Letters, No. 837.]

April 18. 936. The K. to Alan de Galweia [Galloway]. Hamo de Galloway, clerk, has come to the K. and Council on behalf of Alan, praying the restoration of his lands, and asserting that he was ready to do homage and give a charter of faithful service. The K. complies with the petition, orders the lands in Ireland given to Alan by King John to be restored, and commands the justiciary of Ireland to give seisin thereof to Alan or his emissary. Alexander King of Scotland, and part of his Council, will meet the K. and part of his Council at York, to make a treaty on matters touching the kingdoms of England and Scotland. The K. commands Alan to come thither to render homage and a charter as above. The K. will do what of right he ought to do regarding Alan's lands in England. Westminster. [Close, 4 *Hen. Had come to England, but in consequence of the illness of his mother was unable to be at Nottingham on Sunday in the octaves of the Holy Trinity. Prays Hubert to name a day after the return of the K. from York, when the affairs of Ireland can be considered before the K., the justiciary, and the K.'s counsellors. [Royal Letters, No. 251.]

Mandate to the Archbishop that out of the issues of Ireland he satisfy the King of the Isles for the arrears; and that he make provision for future payment of the rent. York. [Close, 4 *Hen. Prays that the latter will, with the aid and counsel of Hubert de Bugh, induce the justiciary of Ireland to give him seisin of his land of Balebuin, in that country, which King John granted to him after the departure of Hugh de Lasey from Ireland. Further prays that the Dean will procure for him the K.'s letters touching this seisin. Should have attended the court at Nottingham, but frequent casualties in the marches obliged him to join a conference on that Friday after the feast of the Holy Trinity. [Royal Letters, No. 292.]

July 26. 946. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to cause the Archbishop of Armagh to have such seisin of the lands and tenements of his see, as his predecessor had when he died. Westminster. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 6.]

The latter is not to be disturbed meanwhile. Westminster. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 6.]

Aug. 8. 948. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. A question having arisen before Pandulph, the Legate, to whom the Pope committed cognizance of the cause, between Master Robert of Bedford, now Bishop of Lismore, and Robert Bishop of Waterford, in regard to the possession of the see of Lismore, the possession of this see was, through the absence and contumacy of the Bishop of Waterford, finally adjudged to the Bishop of Lismore; and as he cannot obtain that possession without the K.'s order, the K. commands the justiciary to cause such possession to be given to the Bishop of Lismore. Oxford. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 6.]

[Aug. 11.]

The justiciary further binds himself by oath to observe the foregoing stipulations, and subjects his person to an excommunication and his land to an interdict if he does not do so, or in case of transgression, fails to amend his acts if admonished by the Archbishop. The justiciary having committed his seal in Ireland for purposes of justice, the seals of the Archbishop of Dublin and of William de Mariscis are, on his petition, put to this deed until it shall be sealed with the justiciary's own seal. - Aug. 15. 955. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. Some of the canons of Ossory, during a late vacancy in their church, came to the K., and having obtained from him licence in proper form elected as Bishop Master Peter Malveisin, their brother canon. The K., believing the election to be valid, gave his assent. But it appears ex post facto that Master Peter was ineligible, because he was not born in lawful wedlock; and though he obtained from the Pope an indulgence of legitimacy, the Pope did not confirm his election, and the K. did not grant a second licence to elect. Wherefore the K. revokes what has been done in this election as of no effect, and commands the justiciary to take into the K.'s hand the see of Ossory, and deliver the custody thereof to Thomas Fitz Adam. The K. has written to the Dean and Chapter in favour of John de St. John, that he may be promoted as Bishop, and wills and commands that the issues of the see from the time when the custody thereof was assigned to Master Peter be restored to the K. The justiciary shall exact from Master Peter the restoration of the issues, and safely keep them till the K. shall otherwise order. Berkeley.
Letters from the K. to the Dean and Chapter of Ossory to elect John de St. John as Bishop.
Mandate that Thomas Fitz Adam shall take the custody of the see; that the justiciary shall deliver it; that Thomas shall safely keep the issues; and that the justiciary shall cause them to be answered for to the K. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 4.]

1220. John; to hold during pleasure at 100s. rent. Mandate for seisin. Monmouth. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 5.]
- Aug. 17. 960. The K. commands Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of Ireland, that, notwithstanding the mandate to take into the K.'s hand all demesne lands and escheats alienated by him, he permit Thomas Fitz Adam to hold in peace his lands of Baliscadan, Baliavelin, Lissekilli, Balionenny, and Statgrum, assigned to him by the K.'s order for his maintenance. Mandate that, having taken security for the 100 marks, the justiciary give seisin of the manor to William and Eve. Wilton. [Fine Rolls, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 2.]
- Sept. 12. 963. The K. commands Geoffrey de Mariscis, justiciary of Ireland, to cause Henry Archbishop of Dublin to have at the K.'s Exchequer, Dublin, 100 marks for 5 years, in payment of 500 marks for his expenses touching the affairs of King John at the General Council in the Court of Rome. Wilton. [Pat., 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

- Sept. 18. 965. The K. to the knights, free tenants, and others of his demesne lands in Ireland. Is indebted to the Pope, Queen Berengaria, the Lord Louis, the Viscount de Thouars, and others; and therefore prays that they make an efficient aid to him. Specially sends Ralph de Norwich, his clerk, to assist the justiciary of Ireland and the Archbishop of Dublin in collecting this aid. Winchester. [Pat., 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 1.]
- Sept. 24. 966. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland, that when the aid shall have been assessed by him, the Archbishop of Dublin, and Ralph de Norwich, it be collected at the Exchequer, Dublin, and then safely deposited with the Templars or Hospitallers under their seals; that the money which the justiciary has promised to pay to the K. be similarly deposited; both sums shall then be safely sent to England by divers messengers; and the Templars or Hospitallers shall answer to the K. for the amount.

The K. prays John de St. John to attend diligently to this matter, and cause him to be apprised how much each has done for the K. Northampton. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

Sept. 24. 967. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. The good men of Dublin have informed the K. that a house has been newly erected in the city of Dublin in the middle of a place and of a highway, to the nuisance of the city. Mandate that the justiciary cause the house to be viewed by good and lawful men, and if it be a nuisance to the city, that he cause it to be removed. Northampton. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

Sept. 24. 968. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. The good men of Waterford grievously complain that vessels carrying merchandise, wines, and other necessities from ports of various countries, which used to unlade at the K.'s port of Waterford, now unlade at other ports, to the K.'s loss and that of the vill of Waterford. By these means the vill is reduced to such want that the inhabitants, who formerly enjoyed abundance, have scarcely enough to live upon. The K., anxious to correct a state of things so injurious to himself, commands the justiciary that, notwithstanding any orders to the contrary, he do not allow ships to unlade at any port save the K.'s port of Waterford. The K. moreover commands the justiciary that he do not further burden the men of Waterford with prisage of their wines, merchandise, and food, nor take from them anything by way of loan or otherwise unless at their will; and that he restore whatever he has taken in this way. Northampton. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

Sept. 24. 969. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. Collations to churches of the K.'s gift having been irregularly made in Ireland without the K. being consulted, the K. commands the justiciary that for the future in case of vacancy he do nothing without the K.'s assent. Northampton.

The K. commands in like manner regarding cathedral churches. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

Sept. 24. 970. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland, that if it be expedient to the K. and his land that the castle in Delven, Richard de Tuit's land, be fortified, he cause Richard to have for that purpose one year's service due for the land of Walter de Lasey of Meath. Northampton. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

Sept. 24. 971. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. A grave complaint has reached the K. from some merchants frequenting Ireland and from the good men of Dublin, that they are so burdened by the justiciary and his bailiffs with undue exactions, as well by prisage as by loans of wines, clothes, victuals, and other articles, that little is left to them to live on; and their goods are taken from them whether they will or not under the name of loan, which makes the opprobrium greater. This violent taking has rendered the city of Dublin and other Irish cities so hateful to merchants of various countries that none will go thither. The K. cannot longer bear with things so manifestly damaging to himself and his kingdom; and he therefore commands the justiciary that he do not further take anything by way of loan in the vill of Dublin, or the K.'s other cities or vills, or from a stranger, unless by the will of the sellers. If he take anything on loan from the K.'s subjects he shall make satisfaction within 40 days, and if from a stranger, he shall cause satisfaction to be made at once. Otherwise the K. will cause amends to be made. Northampton. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 3.]

Sept. 25. 972. The K. sends Ralph de Norwich, his clerk, as the K.'s emissary to Ireland, and commands all bailiffs and subjects to give Ralph counsel and aid in promoting the K.'s business. Northampton. [Pat., 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 1.]

Sept. 28. 973. The citizens of Dublin give to the K. a moiety of the debt which Meyler Fitz Henry owes to them, and the other moiety for the fortification of their city. Mandate to Geoffrey de Mariscis, justiciary of Ireland, to distrain Meyler to pay the debt, and to take security from the men of Dublin for the K.'s moiety. Newport Paynell. [Fine Rolls, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 2.]

Oct. 5. 974. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. The good men of the K.'s city of Dublin have informed the K. that the city was always wont to have the Anna Liffey [Avelith] in such a condition that any kind of victuals could be conveyed in boats up and down to the city; and the citizens and others always had a fishery on that river. The prior and friars of the hospital of Kilmainham have however lately made a pool [stagnum] there, whereby the city and citizens are much damnified; their fishery is totally destroyed because the pool prevents the fish from ascending; and their boats can no longer pass up and down as they used to do. Mandate to the justiciary that, on view to be made by good men of the venue of Dublin other than the citizens, he cause the river to be so enlarged and the pool so rectified that ships and boats with every kind of victuals, with stones and wood, may have free passage up and down the river, and that fish may have free approach to the fisheries of the K. and his subjects, and free return therefrom. Westminster. [Close, 4 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 2 dors.]

Nov. 20.

978. The K. commands the justiciary, magnates, and others in Ireland to receive with honor Master James, the Pope's chaplain and penitentiary, sent as Papal Legate to Ireland. If anything new should arise touching the state of that country, they shall have recourse to his counsel and aid. Westminster. [Pat., 5 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 7.]

Dec. 7.

979. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. Has intimated that he had granted to Thomas Fitz Adam the land which belonged to Richard de la Feld in Chapel Ysold and Kilsalthan, and which Richard had on lease from King John; to hold to Thomas during pleasure for 100s. yearly rent. But the justiciary had caused the land to be extended for 30 librates, and taken it into the K.'s hand. The K. is well pleased with that extent; but it is his pleasure and that of his Council that Thomas have and hold the land for 10l. a year payable at the Exchequer, Dublin. Mandate that the justiciary demise the land to Thomas at a yearly farm of 10l. Westminster. [Close, 5 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 19.]

March 8.

985. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. The practice in Ireland of having only one justice itinerant differs much from the practice in England, where there were always several justices itinerant. It is not the custom for one justice itinerant to keep a record, and the danger of there being only one roll is obviated by several justices each having his roll. The K. and his Council therefore ordain that to the sole justice itinerant now in Ireland two be associated, namely, a knight and a clerk, and for this purpose the K. names Thomas Fitz Adam and Bartholomew de Camera, the K.'s clerk. With the present sole justice the latter shall make their Eyre and administer justice according to the laws and customs of the kingdom. The K. commands the justiciary to cause it to be so done, and to provide Bartholomew with wherewithal to maintain himself on the K.'s service. Huntingdon.

Mandate to Thomas Fitz Adam to diligently attend to the office. [Close, 5 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 14.]

987. The K. to John de St. John, treasurer, and the other barons of the Exchequer, Ireland. Roger de Tuit made with King John a fine of 20 marks for his release from prison; the Prior of Lanthony and Walter de Lasey, sureties for the fine, have answered for it at the Exchequer, Westminster; wherefore the K. commands John de St. John and the barons of Ireland to restore any portion of the fine they may have received. May 8.

991. The K. to the justiciary of Ireland. Master Robert of Bedford having been canonically elected Bishop of Lismore, and the K.'s assent duly obtained, he was consecrated as Bishop; and the K. commanded possession to be given to him. Robert Bishop of

Waterford, however, subsequently claimed a right to the possession of the see of Lismore as united to that of Waterford, and demanded its instant restitution to himself. He was not, as he alleged, summoned to the election, nor was he absent by contumacy, but he had gone by precept of G[...], late Legate of England, to the consecration of the Bishop of Carlisle, and was thus prevented opposing. Possession was therefore restored to the Bishop of Waterford. The question between the Bishops having subsequently by mandate of the Pope been referred to Pandulph Bishop elect of Norwich, Apostolic Legate, Stephen Archbishop of Canterbury, and Benedict Bishop of Rochester, possession was by definitive sentence assigned to the Bishop of Lismore. The K. therefore, by assent of his Council, decrees accordingly, and commands the justiciary to give seisin of the see of Lismore to the Bishop of that see. Westminster. [Close, 5 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 12 dors.]

Westminster. [Close, 5 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 6.]

July 2. 995. Theobald Walter being of full age, the K. has taken his homage, and commands the justiciary of Ireland to cause Theobald to have seisin of all the lands which he ought to hold of the K. in capite in that country, and which descend to him by right of inheritance from Theobald his father. Shrewsbury. [Close, 5 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 6.]

July 17. 1001. The K. to Thomas Fitz Anthony. Since the death of King John the K. has received nothing whatever from the demesne lands, rents of assise, or escheats of Ireland. Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of that country, made a fine with the K. in England to satisfy the K. for his shortcomings, and appointed a day for rendering the fine, undertaking that he would restrain the expenditure of the keepers of the K.'s castles, and give security for those keepers; and he confirmed all this by oath and by deed. He has, however, cared to observe none of these things. The K. commanded that all the revenues of Ireland should be paid into the hands of the treasurer and other bailiffs of the Exchequer, to be dealt with as the K. should order; Geoffrey nevertheless caused those revenues to be received in his chamber, disposing thereof rather according to his will than the K.'s mandates. The K. is thereby provoked to desire that Geoffrey no longer preside over his land of Ireland; and by the common counsel and assent of his magnates and subjects of England ordains and wills that Henry Archbishop of Dublin have the custody and care of that land. Mandate that Thomas Fitz Anthony be respondent and intente to the Archbishop as the K.'s bailiff. Westminster.

1079. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin. Henry de Verneuil has informed the K. that a plea having been moved when Geoffrey de Marisco was justiciary of Ireland, between Henry, as defendant, and Walter de Ridelesford, as plaintiff, touching the land of Dovenabroc, Henry came to England and remained long on the K.'s service. Meanwhile, having been adjudged out of the possession of the land by default, owing to his absence, Henry obtained of the K. letters to warrant his default, and handed them to the justiciary; but the latter would do nothing herein because the letters came after judgment. The K. therefore commands the justiciary to inquire into the truth of these facts, and if they are as stated, then to give Henry such seisin of the land as he had before judgment given. It would be unjust that Henry should lose his land by default, when the K. has duly warranted that default to him. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 22 dors.]

1096. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Very many merchants of England, Poitou, and Gascony, and principally Stephen de Croy, have complained that when they arrive at the city of Dublin they are not permitted to remain beyond 40 days unless they unlade their merchandise. In consequence thereof, Richard de Nauris, Stephen's servant, last year made a fine of 100s. with the bailiffs and burgesses of Dublin, for his lord's merchandise, that so long as he remained in Ireland he might be free from a similar exaction. Nevertheless, they have taken from him half a last of hides in order to compel another fine. As it seems to the K. unjust and hurtful to the kingdom to oblige merchants when unwilling to unlade their merchandise; and the K. does not believe that the bailiffs and burgesses of Dublin obtained a warrant to do so from himself or his predecessors, the K. commands the justiciary to cause them to desist from this harassing of or extortion from merchants, and to restore to Richard what they have taken, until they show warrant for the purpose. Kennington. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 13.]

Westminster. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 9.]
- June 4. 1110. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. A conference having lately been held in London before the K.'s 1223.

Council touching the land which Hugh de Lasey demands to have restored to him in Ireland, the K. offered to commit that land with its castles to the Earls of Chester, Salisbury, Gloucester, and to Walter de Lasey for 5 years from Easter last past, to be restored at the K.'s pleasure into the K.'s hands at the end of that term; provided they submitted to be compelled by their lands and ecclesiastical jurisdiction to make this restoration; but as they were unwilling to undertake such an obligation, nothing was done. Hugh, as the K. hears, is now plotting forcibly to invade the K.'s land of Ireland; wherefore the K. commands the justiciary to provide against Hugh's attack by fortifying with victuals and men the K.'s Irish castles. Sends the Pope's letters of excommunication against Hugh and his accomplices if they invade the K.'s land. The justiciary shall use those letters at the proper time, and prepare all things for the K.'s security and for Hugh's injury. Sends William de Serland with his companions for the custody of the castle of Carrickfergus and its wards. The justiciary shall provide William and his companions with men and victuals for the fortification of the castle as he may deem expedient. Westminster. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 9.]

June 4. 1112. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Has heard the record of the plaint between Geoffrey de Marisco and Eve, his wife, plaintiffs, and Reginald Talebot, defendant, touching 5 carucates of land in Dalkeia [Dalkey]. It is contained in this record that when Reginald had answered what was objected to him, he showed a charter of King John referring to that land, and by reason thereof prayed peace till the K.'s age. He also called the K. to warranty, and as he did not, as appeared to the court, have the K. to warranty, Geoffrey and Eve, his wife, by judgment of the court, recovered seisin of the land. A conference having been thereupon held between the magnates of the kingdom and legal experts, the sentence was that there is error in two respects; 1st, because Reginald did not have peace till the K.'s age, which according to the custom of the realm he ought to have had by reason of the charter aforesaid; 2ndly, because when any person impleaded in the K.'s court touching land has called to warranty, it is not in the power of the caller, nay of the court, that the person called to warranty should be summoned and compelled to appear to warrant, or to show why he ought not to do so. If therefore Reginald did not have the K. to warranty it ought not to have been reputed a default, as the K.'s court is not above the K. to summon or compel the K. unless he wills it; wherefore there is error here also. The K. therefore commands the justiciary to re-seise Reginald in the land, the seisin of which he has lost by an unjust judgment. Westminster. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 9.]

June 5. 1113. Writ of Liberate to E., treasurer, and F. and W., chamberlains, to pay to William de Serland, going to Ireland as the K.'s messenger, 40 marks for the expenses of him and his companions; and to Francis de Bresne going thither in the same capacity, 100s. for the same purpose, &c. Westminster. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 9.]
- June 5. 1114. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. The threatened raids of foes render it expedient to constitute as bailiffs in Ireland persons who can and will see to the safety of the land, and if need be vigorously attack the K.'s enemies. Wherefore, the K. commits during pleasure to Richard de Burgh the seneschalship of Munster, with the castle of Limerick; that he may be the K.'s bailiff under the justiciary, and be intentive and respondent therefor to the latter. The good men of Dublin having complained that they suffered great loss and grievance by mills which the friars of Kilmainham erected to the nuisance of the city, and by a pool which they made across the Avenelif [Anna Liffey], the K. commanded Geoffrey de Marisco, then justiciary of Ireland, that he cause the mill and pools to be placed in the same state as they were in at the departure from that country of King John; and that taking with him knights, free tenants, and others from Ireland, he cause the course of the river to be rectified, so that ships with merchandise might have free ingress to and egress from the city of Dublin, and fish might ascend to and

Aug. 8.

1130. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. Is informed by the good men of Dublin of some matters regarding the justiciary, which the K. is unwilling to believe, namely:— That the justiciary tries to make free from tolls and aids his men, who participate in the liberty enjoyed by the citizens of Dublin, and share in common with them the contract for things on sale; his clerks resort to the ecclesiastical court touching lay fees which they bought within the bounds of the city; if any of the clerk's men, even a servant, have an action against a citizen, the latter is dragged into that court, there to answer and abide the law; if any of the justiciary's men, on the contrary, commit an offence against one of the citizens, that citizen is obliged to seek justice in the justiciary's court; if a baker is attached for light bread, and is even convicted before the K.'s bailiffs, the justiciary thereupon has recourse to his court, and demands the transgressor from the bailiffs, dealing with him as he will; the justiciary has erected a pillory in the K.'s highway, claiming for himself what belongs to the K.; religious houses plead in the ecclesiastical court touching lands; and the justiciary leaves unredressed the purpresture which religious houses make on the city of Dublin. These things are contrary to the K.'s right and dignity, and to the custom prevailing from olden time in all cities, vills, and places in the kingdom; and are more grievous and offensive to the K., and more disparaging to the fame of the justiciary, because the K. has given the justiciary great power as the K.'s lieutenant in Ireland. The K. therefore commands the justiciary to refrain from these things; otherwise he will lay heavy hands on them. Tower of London. [Close, 7 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 5 dors.]

The K. therefore commands the Archbishop of Dublin that, calling before him the Archbishop of Armagh or his bailiff and William de Tuit, he cause an inquisition to be held; and if the above facts are proved before it, that then he cause the carucate to be restored to the Archbishop of Armagh. - 1149. The K. to the Archbishop of Dublin, justiciary of Ireland. It appeared by the justiciary's letters that Nicholas de la Feld sought by assise of Mort d'ancestor before the K.'s justices, to recover against the Abbot and canons of St. Thomas, Dublin, 2 carucates of land in Kelredheri, but an objection of bastardy having been made against Nicholas, the proceedings were stayed in that court. Nicholas thereupon, by order of the justices, sought to establish his legitimacy in the ecclesiastical court before the Archbishop, and produced witnesses. After publication of proofs, the Archbishop was about to give sentence, when two minors, daughters of Richard de la Feld, father of Nicholas, appealed that the Archbishop should not proceed to sentence, because they would be thereby precluded from hereafter seeking the inheritance. Deferring the appeal, the Archbishop thereupon transmitted the cause to the Pope. The K. is much moved with wonder at this proceeding, because by the production of witnesses and the publication of proofs, there was ample evidence before the Archbishop as to the legitimacy of Nicholas. The minors were not parties to the assise, and the Archbishop erred in declining, as it were, the K.'s inquiry, and transferring to a foreign dignity what ought to be determined by the K. Had Nicholas acquired possession of the land by the assise, the minors might still have claimed it by writ of right in the K.'s court. Wherefore by council of his magnates and subjects, the K. commands the Archbishop that, notwithstanding the appeal, he give sentence, and remit the plaintiff with letters testimonial to the justices, that they may in the plaint before them exhibit justice according to the law and custom of Ireland. [Close, 8 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 17 dors.]

It appears by the inquisition sent by the justiciary that William Fitz Henry held of Philip de Wigorn 10 carucates of land in Cnoncowrth and Baliduvelin; that William, under form of peace and against his will, Philip having inflicted some injury on him, granted to Philip 2 carucates of land in Cnoncowrth; and that Philip unjustly disseised William of $\frac{1}{2}$ carucate in Baliduvelin. Hugh de Lasey, enemy of the K., of the K.'s father, and of Kathal, whom King John by Kathal's advice expelled from Ireland, has without consulting the K. come to that country to disturb it. Against Hugh's coming, Kathal remains, as the Archbishop of Dublin knows, firm in his fidelity to the K. But the closer Kathal adheres to the K.'s service, the more he is harassed by those who pretend fealty to the K., and, as the justiciary knows, shamefully fail against his enemy; so that between Hugh de Lasey on the one hand, and those who pretend to be faithful on the other, Kathal is placed in great difficulty. Wherefore, unless it is better that the peace of Ireland should be subverted by this disturber and by default of some of the K.'s subjects, Kathal prays the K. to send a force thither to restrain Hugh's insolence. 1224.

office of justiciary. Thence he rode to the castle of Trum, where he found some knights and others not assigned for its custody; he shut them up in the castle and besieged it with William de Lasey, its lord. On hearing of the Earl's arrival, the K.'s Irish barons, with the King of Connaught in partibus Mauthie [Meath?], held a conference, came over to the Earl, and the barons rendered their service. The latter will render material service in the war, and more especially Sir Geoffrey de Marisco, who by no means favours Hugh de Lasey. The K. would do well to commend Geoffrey and the other Irish barons in his letters. The K.'s citizens of Ireland are prompt in the K.'s service, and they also deserve commendation.

Arrived at Trum, the Earl despatched Sir W. le Gros, his eldest cousin, with 20 armed knights and 20 armed soldiers to Carrickfergus [Cnocfergus], in Ulster, where they found Hugh de Lasey besieging the castle. The latter sent 8 boats with armed men to harass them; but the knights and soldiers all safely entered the castle. When Hugh saw this he raised the siege and retired. The Earl remaining at Trum, sent a force of horse against William de Lasey conquered him, and he with difficulty escaped. He had a brother killed there. William killed his horse with his own hand, abandoned his arms, fled into a moor, and was obliged to throw himself on the mercy of the Irish. The Earl's force took a great booty, which was of much service to the army, and returned by a castle of Michael le Gros, burning it, but saving what was there. Owing to William's defeat the castle was abandoned.

The same day an Irishman named O'Reilly [Orauly], powerful in his country, who had come to the K.'s peace after the Earl had received the office of justiciary, rode over to a castle called Cronoc [Cronog] Orauly; sat down in an island and besieged the castle, praying succour of the Earl. The latter sent knights and soldiers to him, who took the castle. In it were the wife of William de Lasey, the daughter of Llewellyn, Griffin's sister, the wife of Thomas Blund, William's brother, and the mother of William, of Thomas, and of him who was killed. Of these the wives of William de Lasey and Thomas Blund are in custody; and within 15 days after these letters shall have gone, the mother of William, of Thomas, and of him who was killed will be prisoners, unless her nephew, the King of Connaught, return to the K.'s peace through her. The Earl's knights besieged the castle of Kilmore and found there Sir Henry Blund, William's brother, the constable, and other knights and soldiers. These surrendered the castle, saving their persons and harness, on condition of finding sureties for their faithful service. On Wednesday, in the vigil of St. Peter ad Vincula [July 31], the castle of Trum [?] was granted on condition that they should give sureties for surrendering the castle on Sunday next after the feast of St. Lawrence [Aug. 11]. On the latter day 7 weeks shall have elapsed since the castle was besieged. On each day of the siege the Earl paid 16*l.*, excepting expenses and the pay of foot soldiers. The lands of those within [the castle] are worth little except that of William [San]medle, which he has by his wife. Since he has been in Ireland the Earl has only received 20*l.* to this date. Many knights, foot soldiers, and even free tenants, will defend the K. if any fresh attack be made on him. [Royal Letters, No. 833.]

When the bearer of these presents was about to depart, our messenger reported to us that on Sunday before the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula [July 28], the castle of William de Lasey, called Grennoch Oraely, was taken by ORaely, and Walter de Ridelesford and Richard de Tuit sent to his assistance. In the castle they took William's mother and wife, Luke, brother of Michael Grossus, and many others. On Monday the castle of Kilmor was taken, and in it were taken Henry Blundus, the brother of William de Lasey, and a clerk called Hugh. William de Lasey's brother was killed, and his head presented to Earl Marshall.

[About

1443. Geoffrey de Marisco, justiciary of Ireland, to the K. On arriving at Waterford the magnates there met him, and gave assurances that they would obey the K.'s mandates. Was about to proceed thence to Dublin, in order to communicate those mandates to all the K.'s subjects of Ireland, when he heard that William Earl Marshall, by assent of Theobald Walter, was about to oppose his passage with all the force of Leinster.

Having at length arrived at Dublin, the justiciary held a council, when all there assembled rendered their oaths of fealty; namely, all the K.'s English subjects of Ireland, excepting William Baron of Naas, Walter de Rudelesford, Matthew Fitz Griffin, and John de Clahull, of Leinster. Theobald Walter, who came to Dublin, as it were, unwillingly, on being asked to take his oath, excused himself, asserting that he could not, unless in presence of the Earl or by his mandate, part with the custody of the castles confided to him by the latter. In regard to this custody it is manifest that, notwithstanding the oath of fealty which Theobald took when the justiciary left Dublin, he has fortified the castle of Dublin with a force against the K. All the castles of Ireland are fortified against the K., save the castle of Limerick, in the custody of Richard de Burgh, who always assists the justiciary in the K.'s affairs. All the Irish are so banded together, and so wheedled by William Crassus, that they cannot be recalled from their conspiracy. Does not believe that the Earl is the cause of this; but the justiciary cannot obtain from the Earl's bailiffs the delivery of the K.'s castles; they fortify them more and more each day. Walter de Lasey and his knights will do nothing against the K.'s dignity, because of the confederacy between the Earl and G. de Lasey, Walter's son.

As to the King of Connaught, who at the instigation of William Crassus, has become heedless of the K.'s mandates, the justiciary summoned him to come to Dublin with and under safe conduct of Walter de Lasey; as the King did not come, the justiciary appointed a day for him at the K.'s castle of Athlone, which is on the confines of the King's territory, and is fortified with men and provisions against the K. If he does not come thither, the justiciary will proceed to carry out against him such orders as the K. may give.

Advises the K. to take into his hand the K.'s castle of Roserea, committed during pleasure to Theobald Walter. The latter has so misconducted himself in regard to the K., that although he has married the justiciary's daughter, and has by her a son, the justiciary would, if it is the K.'s will, deprive him of all the land which he holds of the K. in Ireland. So long as God shall prolong the justiciary's life, the K. need not fear the wickedness or craft of his Irish enemies or others. All these Geoffrey will root out. As to the transgressors above mentioned, the K. will please to punish them as they deserve.

Prays the K.'s order in regard to these matters; and as to the truth of his statements, calls to witness the archbishops, bishops, magnates, and the K.'s subjects of Ireland. [Royal Letters, No. 835.]

When King John went to Ireland he took with him men expert in the law, by whose counsel, at the instance of the Irish, he ordained that English laws should be in force in Ireland; and left these laws reduced to writing under his seal at the Exchequer, Dublin. Now the law and custom of England are, that if a man marry a woman with an inheritance and he has issue by her born alive, that man if he survive his wife shall have during his life the custody of her inheritance, although she may have issue of full age by a former husband; wherefore the K. commands the barons, &c., that they do not give judgment in a plaint before the court of William Earl Marshall between Maurice Fitz Gerald, plaintiff, and Geoffrey de Mariscis, justiciary of Ireland, defendant, or in any other plaint in the like case. As a security to the Archbishop and the Irish clergy that this subvention shall not be drawn into a precedent or engender prejudice to ecclesiastical liberty, the K. sends letters of immunity for that prelate and clergy similar to those given to the prelates and clergy of England. [About 22-25 Jan.] 2241. The K. to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland. The merchants from the land of the Countess of Flanders shall not be arrested or molested. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 19.]

Jan. 25. 2242. The K. to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland. It is just and the K. wills that England and Ireland be common to each other [communes sint ad invicem], and that the K.'s men of England and of Ireland trade hither and thither for the profit and improvement of those lands. The K. therefore commands the justiciary not to impede the men of Ireland wishing to bring corn into England for sale, or the men of Bristol or elsewhere in England wishing to buy corn in Ireland for exportation to England. Westminster. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 19 dors.]

Feb. 23. 2250. The K. to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland. Rejoices to learn that he had safely arrived in Ireland. All is prosperous and pleasant with the K. and his kingdom; and he much desires frequently to hear the like, touching the justiciary and Ireland. Thanks the justiciary for the intelligence that certain persons had procured that a legate be appointed for that country; had previously heard the intelligence, and had sent to the court of Rome to prevent a legate coming thither against the K.'s will. As many complaints reach the K. from those in whose favour he has sent letters to the justiciary that the latter is little pleasant, nay, beyond measure harsh, in executing the K.'s mandates, the K. prays the justiciary to receive his letters in kindness. Westminster. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 18 dors.]

Feb. 23. 2251. The K. to Joan, Queen of Scots, the K.'s sister. Is convinced that she will rejoice in honour conferred on their sister Isabella as on herself. Frederick, Emperor of the Romans, having sent envoys to the K. to demand Isabella in marriage, the K. by counsel of his magnates had given her to the Emperor as his wife; she by the K.'s will consented, and Peter de Vinca, the Emperor's special envoy, swore that the Emperor would marry her. The Archbishop of Cologne, the Dukes of Lorraine and Lemberg, and other envoys will conduct her to the Emperor. Westminster.

The same is signified to Luke Archbishop of Dublin, the justiciary of Ireland, and others. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 18 dors.]

Feb. 25. 2252. The K. to the cardinals of the Holy Roman Church. Has been informed that they feel aggrieved because they do not receive 500 marks of the annual tribute due to that church by the kingdom of England and the land of Ireland; but by the charter of King John granting the tribute it was provided that the whole amount of it should go undivided to the Supreme Pontiff; and the K. has so paid it. If then the cardinals prevail on the Pope to order that the K. answer to them separately for the 500 marks, they will find the K. prompt in answering. Westminster. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 2, m. 6.]

[About Feb.] 2253. The K. to Richard de Burgh. The prisoners taken in the Irish war by Richard and Walter de Rideford are detained in prison in order to obtain a ransom from them; while the K. betakes himself to their lands and tenements for the ransom due to him. It follows that the prisoners are twice ransomed, which is unjust and contrary to all law. Mandate that Richard deliver the prisoners to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland; saving however to Richard the power to take from each imprisoned knight 100s. and his harness, as is the custom in other countries.

Similar letters to Walter de Rydeford. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 18 dors.]

[About Feb.]

2254. The K. to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland. Thanks him for his laudable and faithful services, and prays him to continue labouring for the tranquillity of Ireland. The K. being engaged on matters requiring some expenditure, commands the justiciary to endeavour to obtain money out of the fines of Richard de Burgh and of prisoners taken in the Irish war; and as more profit would accrue by converting to farm the Irish demesne lands than by retaining them, the K. further commands the justiciary to let to farm, by counsel of Luke Archbishop of Dublin and Geoffrey de Turville, at as high a rent as he can, the manors of Newcastle and Chapelizod, the city of Limerick with its fishery, and all the other demesne lands of Ireland. The expense of the custody of Irish castles ought to be reduced; therefore the K. commands that fees be diminished, and that the castles be committed to custody for a certain sum according to the exigencies of each. As payment of the fines of those who were taken in the war by Richard de Burgh and Walter de Radeford is impeded by their persons being imprisoned in order to obtain ransoms from them, and the K. betakes himself to their lands for the ransom due to him, it follows that the prisoners are twice ransomed. As this is unjust, the K. commands Richard and Walter to deliver the prisoners to the K., with liberty to Richard and Walter to take from each knight imprisoned, as is the custom in other kingdoms, 100s. and his harness. Ralph Bishop of Chichester, the K.'s chancellor, having committed the execution of his office in Ireland to Robert Luterall, treasurer of St. Patrick's, Dublin, and it being necessary that the latter take share in the K.'s counsels and business, the K. commands Luke Archbishop of Dublin, that in the presence of the justiciary and treasurer he take from Robert an oath to be faithful to the K. and his chancellor, and not to reveal their counsels.

The K. signifies to Luke Archbishop of Dublin the articles contained in these letters, and prays him to carry them into effect.

A similar mandate to Geoffrey de Thureville, Archdeacon of Dublin, and treasurer of Ireland. [Close, 19 Hen. III., p. 1, m. 18 dors.]

Aug. 30.

2356. The K. to Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland. Knights of the latter from that country had submitted to the K. that when an inheritance in Ireland devolves upon sisters, the justices in Eyre there are uncertain whether after-born sisters ought to hold of the eldest one, and to do homage to her for their portions, or to hold of the chief lord and do homage to him; and had asked the K. to certify what was the usage in England. The K. thereupon states the law and custom in England as follows:—If a tenant in capite had daughters heirs, on his death the K. and his ancestors always had the homages of all the daughters; each of them held of the K. in capite; and if they were within age the K. had custody of them with their marriage. If they held of any one but the K., and were within age, their lord had the custody and the marriage of each, and the eldest rendered homage to the lord for the rest; the other sisters when they reached their age rendered their services to the lord by the hands of the eldest, nor could the eldest demand from the after-born sisters homage, custody, or other feudal subjection, for this reason, that as all the sisters are quasi one heir of one inheritance, if the eldest could have the homage and custody of the other sisters, then the inheritance would be divided, so that the eldest would be lady and heir in one inheritance, heir namely of her own and lady of her sisters portion; this could not be, since the eldest can claim no more than the youngest, unless the capital messuage by right of Esneey. And moreover, as the eldest is heir of all the other sisters who die without issue, if she could have the custody of her sisters or of their children, this would be as it were "to give the lamb to the wolf to devour." Wherefore the K. commands the justiciary to cause the English customs in this case to be proclaimed and maintained in Ireland. Nottingham. [Close, 20 Hen. III., m. 4 dors.]

The K. to his good men in the counties, burghs, and demesnes in Ireland. Has commanded the justiciary of Ireland to assess a toll on them, in order to acquit his heavy debts, as he had assessed a toll on the cities, burghs, and demesnes in England. Nov. 2.

2366. The K. to his justiciary of Ireland. Thanks him for his service, for his diligence in transacting the K.'s business in Connaught during the previous summer, and for the treasure he had lately sent. Having learnt from Luke Archbishop of Dublin and others that it would much conduce to the tranquillity of Connaught if, in addition to the 3 castles which the justiciary has fortified there, he should fortify 2 more in the ensuing summer, the K. is well pleased that it should be so. The justiciary shall draft men for this purpose [attractum fieri faciat] in Lent, and the K., whether he goes to Ireland in person or not, will send some one on his behalf to assist the justiciary with his counsel in carrying on the work. Being much in need of money, has determined to ask the magnates of Ireland, as well prelates as others, to grant him an aid in his necessity, as the prelates and magnates of England have done. If the justiciary believe that the Irish magnates will comply with the K.'s request without repining and without complaining of the losses which they have suffered for the K. in the war, then the justiciary shall lay this request before them, and cause the aid to be collected, and the money thence arising to be safely kept till further orders. Otherwise he is not to communicate the K.'s request or his letters. But in either case he is to cause the cities, burghs, and demesnes in Ireland to be taxed as in England, and to collect the proceeds with all other moneys which he can obtain. Westminster. 2367. Geoffrey de Mariscis represents to the K., that whereas William his son, outlawed for the death of Henry Clement, held of Geoffrey the land of Kylmenhalloe, Ireland, and Geoffrey held it of the Bishop of Limerick, the latter caused the justiciary to seize the land as his escheat. But as the land cannot, according to the custom of the country, be the Bishop's escheat, and as William did not hold it immediately of the Bishop, the K. commands Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland, to give seisin of the land to Geoffrey. 2370. The K. to Luke Archbishop of Dublin and Maurice Fitz Gerald, justiciary of Ireland. The Dean and Chapter of Ardfert having, during vacancy by resignation of G[ilbert], late Bishop of Ardfert, elected another bishop without the K.'s licence, they urgently prayed the K. to give the royal assent to their election. As it is usual on vacancy of a see to demand the K.'s licence before proceeding to elect, the K. does not deem proper to derogate from his right by granting the petition of the Dean and Chapter; this election is therefore void as regards the K. Nevertheless, hearing that this see is poor, the K., to save it from expense, gives to the Archbishop and justiciary power to grant on his behalf to the Dean and Chapter licence to elect; and on their again proceeding to do so, to give the royal assent to a clerk faithful to the K. and to Ireland. Mandate accordingly to the Archbishop and justiciary. Marlborough.

Mandate thereupon by letters close to the Dean and Chapter of Ardfert.

The K. to M[arian] Archbishop of Cashel. During vacancy of the see of Ardfert the Dean and Chapter having, without the K.'s licence, elected a bishop, sent to the K. in England to pray the royal assent. The K. will not and ought not to hearken to their prayer; but in order to spare trouble and expense to the Dean and Chapter, he has granted power to Luke Archbishop of Dublin and the justiciary of Ireland to give them licence to elect. Lest the K. should seem to derogate from his right, it is necessary that the Dean and Chapter should demand this licence and again elect; and as by allowing six months to elapse they may afford the Archbishop an opportunity of laying his hand on the see, the K. prays the latter that he will attempt nothing against the K.'s dignity and wishes. Justice is not to be delayed by reason of the K.'s letters to the justiciary in favour of the Archbishop touching the caption of the Bishop's men, who, the Archbishop suggested, were excommunicated. In obtaining these letters by his proctors, the Archbishop circumvented the K., for when they were obtained the Archbishop and his supporters were excommunicated, as the K. subsequently learnt by letters of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Chichester, Chancellor of the K., and maintainers of the Bishop's cause, who, at the mandate of Luke Archbishop of Dublin and D. The K. will shortly send one of his subjects in whom he confides to fully inspect the state of Ireland, and with the justiciary to make provision regarding the K.'s lands not yet settled or allotted, and his other affairs. It is the K.'s will that this person be assigned, with Luke Archbishop of Dublin and others, to audit the justiciary's account of receipts and expenses. The lands were at that time in the hand of Cornelius O'Heny, then Bishop of Killaloe, as of right belonging to his bishopric. The K.'s council commenced fortifying a castle in the vill of Roscrea by erecting a moat and a wooden tower [britagium]. Meanwhile Henry Archbishop of Dublin from England, justiciary of Ireland, repaired by King John's direction to the vill. Hearing this Bishop Cornelius came thither and prohibited a castle or any fortification from being constructed in his ecclesiastical possessions; and said that if they proceeded further therein he should excommunicate the justiciary and the whole army. Thereupon the justiciary and the army prayed Bishop Cornelius on behalf of the K. and for the common good, that they might be allowed to fortify the moat and wooden tower until the termination of war, undertaking in the K.'s name that the Bishop should then have the vill and its appurtenances, or the just value thereof; the Bishop thereupon granted permission accordingly. [Inq. P. M., 36 Hen. III., No. 61.]

Oct. 28. 3204. The lands which belonged to Gerard de Prendegast in the to 1251-2, county of Wexford [Wexford], are extended at 195l. 8s. 1d.; Sir March 17. William de Valence has custody of those lands;

26 librates of land of the free marriage of the grandmother of the son of Sir John de Cogan, who is one of the heirs of Gerard de 1251.

Prendegast, ought to descend to him; and the marriage of the heir would be so much the more valuable. [Inq. P. M., Incert. Temp. Hen. III., No. 90.]

Oct. 29. 3205. Mandate to the justiciary of Ireland to search the Rolls of the K.'s Exchequer, Dublin, and otherwise inquire whether 60 marks are due to Richard de la Rochelle for arrears of his fee of 20 marks; if so, the justiciary shall pay this amount to Richard. Reading. [Close, 36 Hen. III., m. 32.]

Nov. 14. 3206. As Magnus Mac Olave Duff proposed to raise a force in Ireland to invade the territory of the King of Norway in the Isle of Man, the K. commands John Fitz Geoffrey, justiciary, that no force shall be permitted to leave Ireland for that purpose. Pershore. [Close, 36 Hen. III., m. 32 dors.]

[Close, 36 Hen. III., m. 31.]

Nov. 20. 3209. The K. to his justices of the Common Pleas, Ireland. Agnes de Ruedon' has shown to the K. that Adam Talebot having claimed against her in the K.'s court before the K. 26 acres of land in Wrathelagh as his right, she had called to warranty, by aid of court, the heirs of William Marshall, late Earl of Pembroke; the justices however could not give her full aid of court because some of the heirs had no land in Ireland by which they could be summoned. But as the K.'s power is correlative in Ireland and England [quia vero potestas nostra coadunata est hic et ibi], and he is bound to administer justice to each person, the K. has caused all the Earl's heirs to be summoned before the K. to warrant the land to Agnes, according to the custom of the kingdom. Mandate to the justices not to proceed in the plaint in Ireland until the K. and his court shall have decided whether the heirs ought to warrant the land to Agnes, or not. Lichfield. [Close, 36 Hen. III., m. 31 dors.]

Dec. 8. 3210. The K. pardons to Eustace Cumin the outlawry declared against him for the death of Henry Clement, killed in England, for which he was indicted. Dec. 27. 3211. Writ to the K.'s treasurer and chamberlains for payment out of Irish treasure to P. Chacepore, keeper of the K.'s wardrobe, of 952l. 15s. 3d. to discharge expenses of the K.'s household. York. [Liberate, 36 Hen. III., m. 9.]

- Dec. 29. 3213. As the receiver of the K.'s prisage in Ireland has not answered therefor as he ought to have done, there being much prisage in that country, both of wines and other merchandise, the K. commands the justiciary to appoint Roger de Haverhulle, the K.'s clerk, or other subject of the K. in the receiver's stead, who shall faithfully answer to the K. for the prisage. CALENDARS OF STATE PAPERS, &c.

[IMPERIAL 8vo., cloth. Price 15s. each Volume or Part.]

As far back as the year 1800, a Committee of the House of Commons recommended that Indexes and Calendars should be made to the Public Records, and thirty-six years afterwards another Committee of the House of Commons reiterated that recommendation in more forcible words; but it was not until the incorporation of the State Paper Office with the Public Record Office that the Master of the Rolls found himself in a position to take the necessary steps for carrying out the wishes of the House of Commons.

On 7 December 1855, he stated to the Lords of the Treasury that although "the Records, State Papers, and Documents in his charge constitute the most complete and perfect series of their kind in the civilized world," and although "they are of the greatest value in a historical and constitutional point of view, yet they are comparatively useless to the public, from the want of proper Calendars and Indexes."

Acting upon the recommendations of the Committees of the House of Commons above referred to, he suggested to the Lords of the Treasury that to effect the object he had in view it would be necessary for him to employ a few persons fully qualified to perform the work which he contemplated.

Their Lordships assented to the necessity of having Calendars prepared and printed, and empowered the Master of the Rolls to take such steps as might be necessary for this purpose.

The following Works have been already published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls :—

Supplement to Vol. I. and Vol. II.

Mr. Bergenroth was engaged in compiling a Calendar of the Papers relating to England preserved in the archives of Simancas in Spain, and the corresponding portion removed from Simancas to Paris. Mr. Bergenroth also visited Madrid, and examined the Papers there, bearing on the reign of Henry VIII. The first volume contains the Spanish Papers of the reign of Henry VII.; the second volume, those of the first portion of the reign of Henry VIII. The Supplement contains new information relating to the private life of Queen Katharine of England; and to the projected marriage of Henry VII. with Queen Juana, widow of King Philip of Castile, and mother of the Emperor Charles V.

Vol. III., Part 1.—Hen. VIII.—1525-1526.

Upon the death of Mr. Bergenroth, Don Pascual de Gayangos was appointed to continue the Calendar of the Spanish State Papers. He has pursued a similar plan to that of his predecessor, but has been able to add much valuable matter from Brussels and Vienna, with which Mr. Bergenroth was unacquainted.

THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

[ROYAL 8vo., half-bound. Price 10s. each Volume or Part.]

On 25 July 1822, the House of Commons presented an address to the Crown, stating that the editions of the works of our ancient historians were inconvenient and defective; that many of their writings still remained in manuscript, and, in some cases, in a single copy only. They added, "that an uniform and convenient edition of the whole, published under His Majesty's royal sanction, would be an undertaking honourable to His Majesty's reign, and conducive to the advancement of historical and constitutional knowledge; that the House therefore humbly besought His Majesty, that He would be graciously pleased to give such directions as His Majesty, in His wisdom, might think fit, for the publication of a complete edition of the ancient historians of this realm, and assured His Majesty that whatever expense might be necessary for this purpose would be made good."

The Master of the Rolls, being very desirous that effect should be given to the resolution of the House of Commons, submitted to Her Majesty's Treasury in 1857 a plan for the publication of the ancient chronicles and memorials of the United Kingdom, and it was adopted accordingly. In selecting these works, it was considered right, in the first instance, to give preference to those of which the manuscripts were unique, or the materials of which would help to fill up blanks in English history for which no satisfactory and authentic information hitherto existed in any accessible form. One great object the Master of the Rolls had in view was to form a corpus historicum within reasonable limits, and which should be as complete as possible. In a subject of so vast a range, it was important that the historical student should be able to select such volumes as conformed with his own peculiar tastes and studies, and not be put to the expense of purchasing the whole collection; an inconvenience inseparable from any other plan than that which has been in this instance adopted.

Of the Chronicles and Memorials, the following volumes have been published. They embrace the period from the earliest time of British history down to the end of the reign of Henry VII.

1. THE CHRONICLE OF ENGLAND, by JOHN CAPGRAVE. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

Capgrave was prior of Lynn, in Norfolk, and provincial of the order of the Friars Hermits of England shortly before the year 1464. His Chronicle extends from the creation of the world to the year 1417. As a record of the language spoken in Norfolk (being written in English), it is of considerable value.

2. CHRONICON MONASTERII DE ABINGDON. Vols. I. and II. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1858.

This Chronicle traces the history of the great Benedictine monastery of Abingdon in Berkshire, from its foundation by King Ina of Wessex, to the reign of Richard I., shortly after which period the present narrative was drawn up by an inmate of the establishment. The author had access to the title-deeds of the house; and incorporates into his history various charters of the Saxon kings, of great importance as illustrating not only the history of the locality but that of the kingdom. The work is printed for the first time.

3. LIVES OF EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. I.—La Estoire de Seint Aedward le Rei. II.—Vita Beati Edvardi Regis et Confessoris. III.—Vita Eduuardi Regis qui apud Westmonasterium requiescit. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1858.

The first is a poem in Norman French, containing 4,686 lines, addressed to Alianor, Queen of Henry III., and probably written in the year 1245, on the occasion of the restoration of the church of Westminster. Nothing is known of the author. The second is an anonymous poem, containing 536 lines, written between the years 1440 and 1450, by command of Henry VI., to whom it is dedicated. It does not throw any new light on the reign of Edward the Confessor, but is valuable as a specimen of the Latin poetry of the time. The third, also by an anonymous author, was apparently written for Queen Edith, between the years 1066 and 1074, during the pressure of the suffering brought on the Saxons by the Norman conquest. It notices many facts not found in other writers, and some which differ considerably from the usual accounts.

4. MONUMENTA FRANCISCANA; scilicet, I.—Thomas de Eccleston de Adventu Fratrum Minorum in Angliam. II.—Adæ de Marisco Epistolæ. III.—Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1858.

This volume contains original materials for the history of the settlement of the order of Saint Francis in England, the letters of Adam de Marisco, and other papers connected with the foundation and diffusion of this great body. It has been the aim of the editor to collect whatever historical information could be found in this country, towards illustrating a period of the national history for which only scanty materials exist. None of these have been before printed.

5. FASCICULI ZIZANIORUM MAGISTRI JOHANNIS WYCLIF CUM TRITICO. Ascribed to THOMAS NETTER, of WALDEN, Provincial of the Carmelite Order in England, and Confessor to King Henry the Fifth. Edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, M.A., Tutor and late Fellow of Wadham College, Oxford. 1858.

This work derives its principal value from being the only contemporaneous account of the rise of the Lollards. When written, the disputes of the school-men had been extended to the field of theology, and they appear both in the writings of Wycliff and in those of his adversaries. Wycliff's little bundles of tares are not less metaphysical than theological, and the conflict between Nominalists and Realists rages side by side with the conflict between the different interpreters of Scripture. The work gives a good idea of the controversies at the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries.

6. THE BUIK OF THE CRONICLIS OF SCOTLAND; or, A Metrical Version of the History of Hector Boece; by WILLIAM STEWART. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. B. TURNBULL, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. 1858.

This is a metrical translation of a Latin Prose Chronicle, and was written in the first half of the 16th century. The narrative begins with the earliest legends, and ends with the death of James I. of Scotland, and the "evil ending of the traitors that slew him." Strict accuracy of statement is not to be looked for in such a work as this; but the stories of the colonization of Spain, Ireland, and Scotland are interesting if not true; and the chronicle is valuable as a reflection of the manners, sentiments, and character of the age in which it was composed. The peculiarities of the Scottish dialect are well illustrated in this metrical version, and the student of language will find ample materials for comparison with the English dialects of the same period, and with modern lowland Scotch.

7. JOHANNIS CAPGRAVE LIBER DE ILLUSTRIBUS HENRICIS. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1858.

This work is dedicated to Henry VI. of England, who appears to have been, in the author's estimation, the greatest of all the Henries. It is divided into three distinct parts, each having its own separate dedication. The first part relates only to the history of the Empire, and extends from the election of Henry I., the Fowler, to the end of the reign of the Emperor Henry VI. The second part is devoted to English history, and extends from the accession of Henry I. in the year 1100, to the year 1446, which was the twenty-fourth year of the reign of King Henry VI. The third part contains the lives of illustrious men who have borne the name of Henry in various parts of the world.

Capgrave was born in 1393, in the reign of Richard II., and lived during the Wars of the Roses, for the history of which period his work is of some value.

8. HISTORIA MONASTERII S. AUGUSTINI CANTUARIENSIS, by THOMAS OF ELMHAM, formerly Monk and Treasurer of that Foundation. Edited by CHARLES HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St. Catharine's Hall, and Christian Advocate in the University of Cambridge. 1858.

This history extends from the arrival of St. Augustine in Kent until 1191. Prefixed is a chronology as far as 1418, which shows in outline what was to have been the character of the work when completed. The only copy known is in the possession of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The author was connected with Norfolk, and most probably with Elmham, whence he derived his name.

9. EULOGIUM (HISTORIARUM SIVE TEMPORIS): Chronicon ab Orbe condito usque ad Annum Domini 1366; a Monacho quodam Malmesbiriensi exaratum. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by F. S. HAYDON, Esq., B.A. 1858-1863.

This is a Latin Chronicle extending from the Creation to the latter part of the reign of Edward III., and written by a monk of the Abbey of Malmesbury, in Wiltshire, about the year 1367. A continuation, carrying the history of England down to the year 1413, was added in the former half of the fifteenth century by an author whose name is not known. The original Chronicle is divided into five books, and contains a history of the world generally, but more especially of England to the year 1366. The continuation extends the history down to the coronation of Henry V. The Eulogium itself is chiefly valuable as containing a history, by a contemporary, of the period between 1356 and 1366. The notices of events appear to have been written very soon after their occurrence. Among other interesting matter, the Chronicle contains a diary of the Poitiers campaign, evidently furnished by some person who accompanied the army of the Black Prince. The continuation of the Chronicle is also the work of a contemporary, and gives a very interesting account of the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. It is believed to be the earliest authority for the statement that the latter monarch died in the Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster.

10. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE SEVENTH: Bernardi Andreæ Tholosatis Vita Regis Henrici Septimi; necnon alia quædam ad eundem Regem spectantia. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1858.

The contents of this volume are—(1) a life of Henry VII., by his poet laureate and historiographer, Bernard André, of Toulouse, with some compositions in verse, of which he is supposed to have been the author; (2) the journals of Roger Machado during certain embassies on which he was sent by Henry VII. to Spain and Brittany, the first of which had reference to the marriage of the King's son, Arthur, with Catharine of Arragon; (3) two curious reports by envoys sent to Spain in the year 1505 touching the succession to the Crown of Castile, and a project of marriage between Henry VII. and the Queen of Naples; and (4) an account of Philip of Castile's reception in England in 1506. Other documents of interest in connexion with the period are given in an appendix.

11. MEMORIALS OF HENRY THE FIFTH. I.—Vita Henrici Quinti, Roberto Redmanno auctore. II.—Versus Rhythmici in laudem Regis Henrici Quinti. III.—Elmhami Liber Metricus de Henrico V. Edited by CHARLES A. COLE, Esq. 1858.

This volume contains three treatises which more or less illustrate the history of the reign of Henry V., viz.: A Life by Robert Redman; a Metrical Chronicle by Thomas Elmham, prior of Lenton, a contemporary author; Versus Rhythmici, written apparently by a monk of Westminster Abbey, who was also a contemporary of Henry V. These works are printed for the first time.

12. MUNIMENTA GILDHALLÆ LONDONIENSIS; Liber Albus, Liber Custumarum, et Liber Horn, in archivis Gildhallæ asservati. Vol. I., Liber Albus. Vol. II. (in Two Parts), Liber Custumarum. Vol. III., Translation of the Anglo-Norman Passages in Liber Albus, Glossaries, Appendices, and Index. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Barrister-at-Law. 1859-1862.

The manuscript of the Liber Albus, compiled by John Carpenter, Common Clerk of the City of London in the year 1419, a large folio volume, is preserved in the Record Room of the City of London. It gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of that City in the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and early part of the fifteenth centuries.

The Liber Custumarum was compiled probably by various hands in the early part of the fourteenth century during the reign of Edward II. The manuscript, a folio volume, is also preserved in the Record Room of the City of London, though some portion in its original state, borrowed from the City in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and never returned, forms part of the Cottonian MS. Claudius D. II. in the British Museum. It also gives an account of the laws, regulations, and institutions of the City of London in the twelfth, thirteenth, and early part of the fourteenth centuries.

13. CHRONICA JOHANNIS DE OXENEDES. Edited by Sir HENRY ELLIS, K.H. 1859.

Although this Chronicle tells of the arrival of Hengist and Horsa in England in the year 449, yet it substantially begins with the reign of King Alfred, and comes down to the year 1292, where it ends abruptly. The history is particularly valuable for notices of events in the eastern portions of the kingdom, which are not to be elsewhere obtained, and some curious facts are mentioned relative to the floods in that part of England, which are confirmed in the Friesland Chronicle of Anthony Heinrich, pastor of the Island of Mohr.

14. A COLLECTION OF POLITICAL POEMS AND SONGS RELATING TO ENGLISH HISTORY, FROM THE ACCESSION OF EDWARD III. TO THE REIGN OF HENRY VIII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1859-1861.

These Poems are perhaps the most interesting of all the historical writings of the period, though they cannot be relied on for accuracy of statement. They are various in character; some are upon religious subjects, some may be called satires, and some give no more than a court scandal; but as a whole they present a very fair picture of society, and of the relations of the different classes to one another. The period comprised is in itself interesting, and brings us, through the decline of the feudal system, to the beginning of our modern history. The songs in old English are of considerable value to the philologist.

15. The "OPUS TERTIUM," "OPUS MINUS," &c., of ROGER BACON. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. 1859.

This is the celebrated treatise—never before printed—so frequently referred to by the great philosopher in his works. It contains the fullest details we possess of the life and labours of Roger Bacon; also a fragment by the same author, supposed to be unique, the "Compendium Studii Theologiae."

16. BARTHOLOMÆI DE COTTON, MONACHI NORWICENSIS, HISTORIA ANGLICANA; 449-1298: necnon ejusdem Liber de Archiepiscopis et Episcopis Angliæ. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1859.

The author, a monk of Norwich, has here given us a Chronicle of England from the arrival of the Saxons in 449 to the year 1298, in or about which year it appears that he died. The latter portion of this history (the whole of the reign of Edward I. more especially) is of great value, as the writer was contemporary with the events which he records. An Appendix contains several illustrative documents connected with the previous narrative.

17. BRUT Y TYWYSGION; or, The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

This work, also known as "The Chronicle of the Princes of Wales," has been attributed to Caradoc of Llancarvan, who flourished about the middle of the twelfth century. It is written in the ancient Welsh language, begins with the abdication and death of Cadwalla at Rome, in the year 681, and continues the history down to the subjugation of Wales by Edward I., about the year 1282.

18. A COLLECTION OF ROYAL AND HISTORICAL LETTERS DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY IV. 1399-1404. Edited by the Rev. F. C. HINGESTON, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford. 1860.

This volume, like all the others in the series containing a miscellaneous selection of letters, is valuable on account of the light it throws upon biographical history, and the familiar view it presents of characters, manners, and events. The period requires much elucidation; to which it will materially contribute.

19. THE REPRESSOR OF OVER MUCH BLAMING OF THE CLERGY. By REGINALD PECOCK, sometime Bishop of Chichester. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1860.

The "Repressor" may be considered the earliest piece of good theological disquisition of which our English prose literature can boast. The author was born about the end of the fourteenth century, consecrated Bishop of St. Asaph in the year 1444, and translated to the see of Chichester in 1450. While Bishop of St. Asaph, he zealously defended his brother prelates from the attacks of those who censured the bishops for their neglect of duty. He maintained that it was no part of a bishop's functions to appear in the pulpit, and that his time might be more profitably spent, and his dignity better maintained, in the performance of works of a higher character. Among those who thought differently were the Lollards, and against their general doctrines the "Repressor" is directed. Pecoek took up a position midway between that of the Roman Church and that of the modern Anglican Church; but his work is interesting chiefly because it gives a full account of the views of the Lollards and of the arguments by which they were supported, and because it assists us to ascertain the state of feeling which ultimately led to the Reformation. Apart from religious matters, the light thrown upon contemporaneous history is very small, but the "Repressor" has great value for the philologist, as it tells us what were the characteristics of the language in use among the cultivated Englishmen of the fifteenth century. Pecoek, though an opponent of the Lollards, showed a certain spirit of toleration, for which he received, towards the end of his life, the usual mediæval reward—persecution.

20. ANNALES CAMBRIÆ. Edited by the Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS AB ITHEL, M.A. 1860.

These annals, which are in Latin, commence in the year 447, and come down to the year 1288. The earlier portion appears to be taken from an Irish Chronicle, which was also used by Tigernach, and by the compiler of the Annals of Ulster. During its first century it contains scarcely anything relating to Britain, the earliest direct concurrence with English history is relative to the mission of Augustine. Its notices throughout, though brief, are valuable. The annals were probably written at St. Davids, by Blegewryd, Archdeacon of Llandaff, the most learned man in his day in all Cymru.

21. THE WORKS OF GIRALDUS CAMBRENSIS. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by J. S. BREWER, M.A., Professor of English Literature, King's College, London. Vols. V. and VI. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1861-1873.

These volumes contain the historical works of Gerald du Barry, who lived in the reigns of Henry II., Richard I., and John, and attempted to re-establish the independence of Wales by restoring the see of St. Davids to its ancient primacy. His works are of a very miscellaneous nature, both in prose and verse, and are remarkable chiefly for the racy and original anecdotes which they contain relating to contemporaries. He is the only Welsh writer of any importance who has contributed so much to the mediæval literature of this country, or assumed, in consequence of his nationality, so free and independent a tone. His frequent travels in Italy, in France, in Ireland, and in Wales, gave him opportunities for observation which did not generally fall to the lot of mediæval writers in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and of these observations Giraldus has made due use. Only extracts from these treatises have been printed before, and almost all of them are taken from unique manuscripts.

The Topographia Hibernica (in Vol. V.) is the result of Giraldus' two visits to Ireland. The first in the year 1183, the second in 1185-6, when he accompanied Prince John into that country. Curious as this treatise is, Mr. Dimock is of opinion that it ought not to be accepted as sober truthful history, for Giraldus himself states that truth was not his main object, and that he compiled the work for the purpose of sounding the praises of Henry the Second. Elsewhere, however, he declares that he had stated nothing in the Topographia of the truth of which he was not well assured, either by his own eyesight or by the testimony, with all diligence elicited, of the most trustworthy and authentic men in the country; that though he did not put just the same full faith in their reports as in what he had himself seen, yet, as they only related what they had themselves seen, he could not but believe such credible witnesses. A very interesting portion of this treatise is devoted to the animals of Ireland. It shows that he was a very accurate and acute observer, and his descriptions are given in a way that a scientific naturalist of the present day could hardly improve upon. The Expugnatio Hibernica was written about the year 1188 and may be regarded rather as a great epic than a sober relation of acts occurring in his own days. No one can peruse it without coming to the conclusion that it is rather a poetical fiction than a prosaic truthful history.

Vol. VI. contains the Itinerarium Cambrie et Descriptio Cambrie.

22. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE WARS OF THE ENGLISH IN FRANCE DURING THE REIGN OF HENRY THE SIXTH, KING OF ENGLAND. Vol. I., and Vol. II. (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham, and Vicar of Leighton Buzzard. 1861-1864.

The letters and papers contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from originals or contemporary copies extant in the Bibliothèque Impériale, and the Dépôt des Archives, in Paris. They illustrate the line of policy adopted by John Duke of Bedford and his successors during their government of Normandy, and such other provinces of France as had been acquired by Henry V. We may here trace, step by step, the gradual declension of the English power, until we are prepared to read of its final overthrow.

23. THE ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, ACCORDING TO THE SEVERAL ORIGINAL AUTHORITIES. Vol. I., Original Texts. Vol. II., Translation. Edited and translated by BENJAMIN THORPE, Esq., Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Munich, and of the Society of Netherlandish Literature at Leyden. 1861.

This Chronicle, extending from the earliest history of Britain to the year 1154, is justly the boast of England; for no other nation can produce any history, written in its own vernacular, at all approaching it, either in antiquity, truthfulness, or extent, the historical books of the Bible alone excepted. There are at present six independent manuscripts of the Saxon Chronicle, ending in different years, and written in different parts of the country. In this edition, the text of each manuscript is printed in columns on the same page, so that the student may see at a glance the various changes which occur in orthography, whether arising from locality or age.

24. LETTERS AND PAPERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGNS OF RICHARD III. AND HENRY VII. Vols. I. and II. Edited by JAMES GAIRDNER, Esq. 1861-1863.

The Papers are derived from MSS. in the Public Record Office, the British Museum, and other repositories. The period to which they refer is unusually destitute of chronicles and other sources of historical information, so that the light obtained from these documents is of special importance. The principal contents of the volumes are some diplomatic Papers of Richard III.; correspondence between Henry VII. and Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain; documents relating to Edmund de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk; and a portion of the correspondence of James IV. of Scotland.

25. LETTERS OF BISHOP GROSSETESTE, illustrative of the Social Condition of his Time. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1861.

The Letters of Robert Grosseteste (131 in number) are here collected from various sources, and a large portion of them is printed for the first time. They range in date from about 1210 to 1253, and relate to various matters connected not only with the political history of England during the reign of Henry III., but with its ecclesiastical condition. They refer especially to the diocese of Lincoln, of which Grosseteste was bishop.

26. DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE OF MANUSCRIPTS RELATING TO THE HISTORY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. Vol. I. (in Two Parts); Anterior to the Norman Invasion. Vol. II.; 1066-1200. Vol. III.; 1200-1327. By Sir THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, D.C.L., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1862-1871.

The object of this work is to publish notices of all known sources of British history, both printed and unprinted, in one continued sequence. The materials, when historical (as distinguished from biographical), are arranged under the year in which the latest event is recorded in the chronicle or history and not under the period in which its author, real or supposed, flourished. Biographies are enumerated under the year in which the person commemorated died, and not under the year in which the life was written. This arrangement has two advantages; the materials for any given period may be seen at a glance; and if the reader knows the time when an author wrote, and the number of years that had elapsed between the date of the events and the time the writer flourished, he will generally be enabled to form a fair estimate of the comparative value of the narrative itself. A brief analysis of each work has been added when deserving it, in which the original portions are distinguished from those which are mere compilations. When possible, the sources are indicated from which such compilations have been derived. A biographical sketch of the author of each piece has been added, and a brief notice has also been given of such British authors as have written on historical subjects.

27. ROYAL AND OTHER HISTORICAL LETTERS ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE REIGN OF HENRY III. Vol. I., 1216-1235. Vol. II., 1236-1272. Selected and edited by the Rev. W. W. SHIRLEY, D.D., Regius Professor in Ecclesiastical History, and Canon of Christ Church, Oxford. 1862-1866.

The letters contained in these volumes are derived chiefly from the ancient correspondence formerly in the Tower of London, and now in the Public Record Office. They illustrate the political history of England during the growth of its liberties, and throw considerable light upon the personal history of Simon de Montfort. The affairs of France form the subject of many of them, especially in regard to the province of Gascony. The entire collection consists of nearly 700 documents, the greater portion of which is printed for the first time.

28. CHRONICA MONASTERII S. ALBANI.—1. THOMÆ WALSHINGHAM HISTORIA ANGLICANA; Vol. I., 1272-1381; Vol. II., 1381-1422. 2. WILLELMI RISHANGER CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1307. 3. JOHANNIS DE TROKELowe ET HENRICI DE BLANEFORDE CHRONICA ET ANNALES, 1259-1296; 1307-1324; 1392-1406. 4. GESTA ABBATUM MONASTERII S. ALBANI, a THOMÆ WALSHINGHAM, REGNANTE RICARDO SECUNDO, EJUSDEM ECCLESIE PRECENTORE, COMPILATA; Vol. I., 793-1290; Vol. II., 1290-1349; Vol. III., 1349-1411. 5. JOHANNIS AMUNDESHAM, MONACHI MONASTERII S. ALBANI, UT VIDETUR, ANNALES; Vols. I. and II. 6. REGISTRA QUORUNDAM ABBATUM MONASTERII S. ALBANI, QUI SEculo xv^{mo} FLORUERE; Vol. I., REGISTRUM ABBATIE JOHANNIS WHETHAMSTEDE, ABBATIS MONASTERII SANCTI ALBANI, ITERUM SUSCEPTÆ; ROBERTO BLAKENEY, CAPELLANO, QUONDAM ASCRIPTUM; Vol. II., REGISTRA JOHANNIS WHETHAMSTEDE, WILLELMI ALBON, ET WILLELMI WALINGFORDE, ABBATUM MONASTERII SANCTI ALBANI, CUM APPENDICE, CONTINENTE QUASDAM EPISTOLAS, a JOHANNIS WHETHAMSTEDE CONSCRIPTAS. Edited by HENRY THOMAS RILEY, Esq., M.A., Cambridge and Oxford; and of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1873.

In the first two volumes is a history of England, from the death of Henry III. to the death of Henry V., written by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of St. Albans and prior of the cell of Wymundham, belonging to that abbey. It is printed from MS. VII. in the Arundel Collection in the College of Arms, London, a manuscript of the fifteenth century, collated with MS. 13 E. IX. in the King's Library in the British Museum, and MS. VII. in the Parker Collection of Manuscripts at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

In the third volume is a Chronicle of English History, attributed to William Rishanger, monk of Saint Albans, who lived in the reign of Edward I., printed from the Cottonian Manuscript, Faustina B. IX. (of the fourteenth century) in the British Museum, collated with MS. 14 C. VII. (fols. 219-231) in the King's Library, British Museum, and the Cottonian Manuscript, Claudius E. III., fols. 306-331: Also an account of transactions attending the award of the kingdom of Scotland to John Balliol by Edward I., 1291-1292, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., attributed to William Rishanger above mentioned, but on no sufficient ground: A short Chronicle of English History, from 1292 to 1300, by an unknown hand, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI. A short Chronicle from 1297 to 1307, Willelmi Rishanger Gesta Edwardi Primi Regis Angliæ, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library, and MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI., with an addition of Annales Regum Angliæ, probably by the same hand: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1299, 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1295 to 1300, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: and a fragment of a Chronicle of English History, 1285 to 1307, from MS. 14 C. I. in the Royal Library.

In the fourth volume is a Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer, 1259 to 1296, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: Annals of Edward II., 1307 to 1323, by John de Trokelowe a monk of St. Albans, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A continuation of Trokelowe's Annals, 1323, 1324, by Henricus de Blanford, from MS. Cotton. Claudius D. VI.: A full Chronicle of English History, by an anonymous writer of St. Albans, 1392 to 1406, from MS. VII. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge; and an account of the benefactors of St. Albans, written in the early part of the fifteenth century, from MS. VI. in the same Library.

The fifth, sixth, and seventh volumes contain a history of the Abbots of St. Albans, and of the fortunes and vicissitudes of the house, from 793 to 1411, mainly compiled by Thomas Walsingham, Precentor of the Abbey in the reign of Richard II.; from MS. Cotton. Claudius E. IV., in the British Museum; with a Continuation, from the closing pages of the Parker MS. No. VII., in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

The eighth and ninth volumes, in continuation of the Annals, contain a Chronicle, probably written by John Amundesham, a monk of St. Albans.

The tenth and eleventh volumes relate especially to the acts and proceedings of Abbots Whethamstede, Albion, and Wallingford, and may be considered as a memorial of the chief historical and domestic events occurring during those periods.

29. CHRONICON ABBATIE EVESHAMENSIS, AUCTORIBUS DOMINICO PRIORE EVESHAMIE ET THOMÆ DE MARLEBERGE ABBATE, a FUNDATIONE AD ANNUM 1213, UNA CUM CONTINUATIONE AD ANNUM 1418. Edited by the Rev. W. D. MACRAY, M.A., Bodleian Library, Oxford. 1863.

The Chronicle of Evesham illustrates the history of that important monastery from its foundation by Egwin, about 690, to the year 1418. Its chief feature is an autobiography, which makes us acquainted with the inner daily life of a great abbey, such as but rarely has been recorded. Interspersed are many notices of general, personal, and local history which will be read with much interest. This work exists in a single MS., and is for the first time printed.

30. RICARDI DE CIRENCESTRIA SPECULUM HISTORIALE DE GESTIS REGUM ANGLIÆ. Vol. I., 447-871. Vol. II., 872-1066. Edited by JOHN E. B. MAYOR, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1863-1869.

The compiler, Richard of Cirencester, was a monk of Westminster, 1355-1400. In 1391 he obtained a licence to make a pilgrimage to Rome. His history, in four books, extends from 447 to 1066. He announces his intention of continuing it, but there is no evidence that he completed any more. This chronicle gives many charters in favour of Westminster Abbey, and a very full account of the lives and miracles of the saints, especially of Edward the Confessor, whose reign occupies the fourth book. A treatise on the Coronation, by William of Sudbury, a monk of Westminster, fills book iii. c. 3. It was on this author that C. J. Bertram fathered his forgery, De Situ Britannia, in 1747.

31. YEAR BOOKS OF THE REIGN OF EDWARD THE FIRST. Years 20-21, 21-22, 30-31, and 32-33. Edited and translated by ALFRED JOHN HORWOOD, Esq., of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law. 1863-1873.

The volumes known as the "Year Books" contain reports in Norman-French of cases argued and decided in the Courts of Common Law. They may be considered to a great extent as the "lex non scripta" of England, and have been held in the highest veneration by the ancient sages of the law, and were received by them as the repositories of the first recorded judgments and dicta of the great legal luminaries of past ages. They are also worthy of the attention of the general reader on account of the historical information and the notices of public and private persons which they contain, as well as the light which they throw on ancient manners and customs.

32. NARRATIVES OF THE EXPULSION OF THE ENGLISH FROM NORMANDY, 1449-1450.—Robertus Blondelli de Reductione Normanniae: Le Recouvrement de Normandie, par Berry, Hérault du Roy: Conférences between the Ambassadors of France and England. Edited, from MSS. in the Imperial Library at Paris, by the Rev. JOSEPH STEVENSON, M.A., of University College, Durham. 1863.

This volume contains the narrative of an eye-witness who details with considerable power and minuteness the circumstances which attended the final expulsion of the English from Normandy in the year 1450. The history commences with the infringement of the truce by the capture of Fougères, and ends with the battle of Formigny and the embarkation of the Duke of Somerset. The whole period embraced is less than two years.

33. HISTORIA ET CARTULARIUM MONASTERII S. PETRI GLOUCESTRÆ. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by W. H. HART, Esq., F.S.A., Membre correspondant de la Société des Antiquaires de Normandie. 1863-1867.

This work consists of two parts, the History and the Cartulary of the Monastery of St. Peter, Gloucester. The history furnishes an account of the monastery from its foundation, in the year 681, to the early part of the reign of Richard II., together with a calendar of donations and benefactions. It treats principally of the affairs of the monastery, but occasionally matters of general history are introduced. Its authorship has generally been assigned to Walter Froucester, the twentieth abbot, but without any foundation.

34. ALEXANDRI NECKAM DE NATURIS RERUM LIBRI DUO; with NECKAM'S POEM, DE LAUDIBUS DIVINÆ SAPIENTIÆ. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1863.

Neckam was a man who devoted himself to science, such as it was in the twelfth century. In the "De Naturis Rerum" are to be found what may be called the rudiments of many sciences mixed up with much error and ignorance. Neckam was not thought infallible, even by his contemporaries, for Roger Bacon remarks of him, "this Alexander in many things wrote what was true and useful; but he neither can nor ought by just title to be reckoned among authorities." Neckam, however, had sufficient independence of thought to differ from some of the schoolmen who in his time considered themselves the only judges of literature. He had his own views in morals, and in giving us a glimpse of them, as well as of his other opinions, he throws much light upon the manners, customs, and general tone of thought prevalent in the twelfth century. The poem entitled "De Laudibus Divinæ Sapientiae" appears to be a metrical paraphrase or abridgment of the "De Naturis Rerum." It is written in the elegiac metre; and though there are many lines which violate classical rules, it is, as a whole, above the ordinary standard of mediæval Latin.

35. LEECHDOMS, WORTCUNNING, AND STARCRAFT OF EARLY ENGLAND; being a Collection of Documents illustrating the History of Science in this Country before the Norman Conquest. Vols. I., II., and III. Collected and edited by the Rev. T. OSWALD COCKAYNE, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. 1864-1866.

This work illustrates not only the history of science, but the history of superstition. In addition to the information bearing directly upon the medical skill and medical faith of the times, there are many passages which incidentally throw light upon the general mode of life and ordinary diet. The volumes are interesting not only in their scientific, but also in their social aspect. The manuscripts from which they have been printed are valuable to the Anglo-Saxon scholar for the illustrations they afford of Anglo-Saxon orthography.

36. ANNALES MONASTICI. Vol. I.:—Annales de Margan, 1066-1232; Annales de Theokesberia, 1066-1263; Annales de Burton, 1004-1263. Vol. II.:—Annales Monasterii de Wintonia, 519-1277; Annales Monasterii de Waverleia, 1-1291. Vol. III.:—Annales Prioratus de Dunstaplia, 1-1297; Annales Monasterii de Bermundeseia, 1042-1432. Vol. IV.:—Annales Monasterii de Oseneia, 1016-1347; Chronicon vulgo dictum Chronicon Thomæ Wykes, 1066-1289; Annales Prioratus de Wigornia, 1-1377. Vol. V.:—Index and Glossary. Edited by HENRY RICHARDS LUARD, M.A., Fellow and Assistant Tutor of Trinity College, and Registrar of the University, Cambridge. 1864-1869.

The present collection of Monastic Annals embraces all the more important chronicles compiled in religious houses in England during the thirteenth century. These distinct works are ten in number. The extreme period which they embrace ranges from the year 1 to 1432, although they refer more especially to the reigns of John, Henry III., and Edward I. Some of these narratives have already appeared in print, but others are printed for the first time.

37. MAGNA VITA S. HUGONIS EPISCOPI LINCOLNIENSIS. From Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Imperial Library, Paris. Edited by the Rev. JAMES F. DIMOCK, M.A., Rector of Barnburgh, Yorkshire. 1864.

This work contains a number of very curious and interesting incidents, and, being the work of a contemporary, is very valuable, not only as a truthful biography of a celebrated ecclesiastic, but as the work of a man, who, from personal knowledge, gives notices of passing events, as well as of individuals who were then taking active part in public affairs. The author, in all probability, was Adam Abbot of Evesham. He was domestic chaplain and private confessor of Bishop Hugh, and in these capacities was admitted to the closest intimacy. Bishop Hugh was Prior of Witham for 11 years before he became Bishop of Lincoln. His consecration took place on the 21st September 1186; he died on the 16th of November 1200; and was canonized in 1220.

38. CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF RICHARD THE FIRST. Vol. I.:—ITINERARIUM PEREGRINORUM ET GESTA REGIS RICARDI. Vol. II.:—EPISTOLÆ CANTUARIENSES; the Letters of the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, Canterbury; 1187 to 1199. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Vicar of Navestock, Essex, and Lambeth Librarian. 1864-1865.

The authorship of the Chronicle in Vol. I., hitherto ascribed to Geoffrey Vinesauf, is now more correctly ascribed to Richard, Canon of the Holy Trinity of London. The narrative extends from 1187 to 1199; but its chief interest consists in the minute and authentic narrative which it furnishes of the exploits of Richard I., from his departure from England in December 1189 to his death in 1199. The author states in his prologue that he was an eye-witness of much that he records; and various incidental circumstances which occur in the course of the narrative confirm this assertion.

The letters in Vol. II., written between 1187 and 1199, are of value as furnishing authentic materials for the history of the ecclesiastical condition of England during the reign of Richard I. They had their origin in a dispute which arose from the attempts of Baldwin and Hubert, archbishops of Canterbury, to found a college of secular canons, a project which gave great umbrage to the monks of Canterbury, who saw in it a design to supplant them in their function of metropolitan chapter. These letters are printed, for the first time, from a MS. belonging to the archiepiscopal library at Lambeth.

39. RECUEIL DES CRONIQUES ET ANCHIENNES ISTORIES DE LA GRANT BRETAGNE A PRESENT NOMME ENGLETERRE, par JEHAN DE WAURIN. Vol. I., R R 2

Albina to 688. Vol. II., 1399-1422. Edited by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864-1868.

40. A COLLECTION OF THE CHRONICLES AND ANCIENT HISTORIES OF GREAT BRITAIN, NOW CALLED ENGLAND, by JOHN DE WATVIN. Albina to 688. (Translation of the preceding Vol. I.) Edited and translated by WILLIAM HARDY, Esq., F.S.A. 1864.

This curious chronicle extends from the fabulous period of history down to the return of Edward IV. to England in the year 1471, after the second deposition of Henry VI. The manuscript from which the text of the work is taken is preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, and is believed to be the only complete and nearly contemporary copy in existence. The work, as originally bound, was comprised in six volumes, since rebound in morocco in 12 volumes, folio maximo, vellum, and is illustrated with exquisite miniatures, vignettes, and initial letters. It was written towards the end of the fifteenth century, having been expressly executed for Louis de Bruges, Seigneur de la Gruthuyse and Earl of Winchester, from whose cabinet it passed into the library of Louis XII. at Blois.

41. POLYCHRONICON RANULPHI HIGDEN, with Trevisa's Translation. Vols. I. and II. Edited by CHURCHILL BABINGTON, B.D., Senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Vols. III., IV., and V. Edited by the Rev. JOSEPH RAWSON LUMBY, M.A., late Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. 1865-1874.

This is one of the many mediæval chronicles which assume the character of a history of the world. It begins with the creation, and is brought down to the author's own time, the reign of Edward III. Prefixed to the historical portion, is a chapter devoted to geography, in which is given a description of every known land. To say that the Polychronicon was written in the fourteenth century is to say that it is not free from inaccuracies. It has, however, a value apart from its intrinsic merits. It enables us to form a very fair estimate of the knowledge of history and geography which well-informed readers of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries possessed, for it was then the standard work on general history.

The two English translations, which are printed with the original Latin, afford interesting illustrations of the gradual change of our language, for one was made in the fourteenth century, the other in the fifteenth. The differences between Trevisa's version and that of the unknown writer are often considerable.

42. LE LIVRE DE REIS DE BRITTANIE E LE LIVRE DE REIS DE ENGLETERE. Edited by JOHN GLOVER, M.A., Vicar of Brading, Isle of Wight, formerly Librarian of Trinity College, Cambridge. 1865.

These two treatises, though they cannot rank as independent narratives, are nevertheless valuable as careful abstracts of previous historians, especially "Le Livre de Reis de Engleterre." Some various readings are given which are interesting to the philologist as instances of semi-Saxonized French.

It is supposed that Peter of Ickham must have been the author, but no certain conclusion on that point has been arrived at.

43. CHRONICA MONASTERII DE MELSA, AB ANNO 1150 USQUE AD ANNUM 1406. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by EDWARD AUGUSTUS BOND, Esq., Assistant Keeper of the Manuscripts, and Egerton Librarian, British Museum. 1866-1868.

The Abbey of Meaux was a Cistercian house, and the work of its abbot is both curious and valuable. It is a faithful and often minute record of the establishment of a religious community, of its progress in forming an ample revenue, of its struggles to maintain its acquisitions, and of its relations to the governing institutions of the country. In addition to the private affairs of the monastery, some light is thrown upon the public events of the time, which are however kept distinct, and appear at the end of the history of each abbot's administration. The text has been printed from what is said to be the autograph of the original compiler, Thomas de Burton, the nineteenth abbot.

44. MATTHEI PARISIENSIS HISTORIA ANGLORUM, SIVE, UT VULGO DICITUR, HISTORIA MINOR. Vols. I., II., and III. 1067-1253. Edited by Sir FREDERIC MADDEN, K.H., Keeper of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1866-1869.

The exact date at which this work was written is, according to the chronicler, 1250. The history is of considerable value as an illustration of the period during which the author lived, and contains a good summary of the events which followed the Conquest. This minor chronicle is, however, based on another work (also written by Matthew Paris) giving fuller details, which has been called the "Historia Major." The chronicle here published, nevertheless, gives some information not to be found in the greater history.

45. LIBER MONASTERII DE HYDA: A CHRONICLE AND CHARTULARY OF HYDE ABBEY, WINCHESTER, 455-1023. Edited, from a Manuscript in the Library of the Earl of Macclesfield, by EDWARD EDWARDS, Esq. 1866.

The "Book of Hyde" is a compilation from much earlier sources, which are usually indicated with considerable care and precision. In many cases, however, the Hyde chronicler appears to correct, to qualify, or to amplify—either from tradition or from sources of information not now discoverable—the statements, which, in substance, he adopts. He also mentions, and frequently quotes from writers whose works are either entirely lost or at present known only by fragments.

There is to be found, in the "Book of Hyde," much information relating to the reign of King Alfred which is not known to exist elsewhere. The volume contains some curious specimens of Anglo-Saxon and Mediæval English.

46. CHRONICON SCOTORUM: A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, from the EARLIEST TIMES to 1135; with a SUPPLEMENT, containing the Events from 1141 to 1150. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1866.

There is, in this volume, a legendary account of the peopling of Ireland and of the adventures which befell the various heroes who are said to have been connected with Irish history. The details are, however, very meagre both for this period and for the time when history becomes more authentic. The plan adopted in the chronicle gives the appearance of an accuracy to which the earlier portions of the work cannot have any claim. The succession of events is marked, year by year, from A.M. 1599 to A.D. 1150. The principal events narrated in the later portion of the work are, the invasions of foreigners, and the wars of the Irish among themselves. The text has been printed from a MS. preserved in the library of Trinity College, Dublin, written partly in Latin, partly in Irish.

47. THE CHRONICLE OF PIERRE DE LANGTOFT, IN FRENCH VERSE, FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD TO THE DEATH OF EDWARD I. Vols. I. and II. Edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A. 1866-1868.

It is probable that Pierre de Langtoft was a canon of Bridlington, in Yorkshire, and that he lived in the reign of Edward I., and during a portion of the reign of Edward II. This chronicle is divided into three parts; in the first is an abridgment of Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Britonum," in the second, a history of the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings, down to the death of Henry III. and in the third a history of the reign of Edward I. The principal object of the work was apparently to show the justice of Edward's Scottish wars. The language is singularly corrupt, and a curious specimen of the French of Yorkshire.

48. THE WAR OF THE GAEDHIL WITH THE GAILL, OR, THE INVASIONS OF IRELAND BY THE DANES AND OTHER NORSEMEN. Edited, with a Translation, by JAMES HENTHORN TODD, D.D., Senior Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University. Dublin. 1867.

The work in its present form, in the editor's opinion, is a comparatively modern version of an undoubtedly ancient original. That it was compiled from contemporary materials has been proved by curious incidental evidence. It is stated in the account given of the battle of Clontarf that the full tide in Dublin Bay on the day of the battle (23 April 1014) coincided with sunrise; and that the returning tide in the evening aided considerably in the defeat of the Danes. The fact has been verified by astronomical calculations, and the inference is that the author of the chronicle, if not himself an eye-witness, must have derived his information from those who were eye-witnesses. The contents of the work are sufficiently described in its title. The story is told after the manner of the Scandinavian Sagas, with poems and fragments of poems introduced into the prose narrative.

49. GESTA REGIS HENRICI SECUNDI BENEDICTI ABBATIS. THE CHRONICLE OF THE REIGNS OF HENRY II. AND RICHARD I., 1169-1192; known under the name of BENEDICT OF PETERBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford, and Lambeth Librarian. 1867.

This chronicle of the reigns of Henry II. and Richard I., known commonly under the name of Benedict of Peterborough, is one of the best existing specimens of a class of historical compositions of the first importance to the student.

50. MUNIMENTA ACADEMICA, OR, DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF ACADEMICAL LIFE AND STUDIES AT OXFORD (in Two Parts). Edited by the Rev. HENRY ANSTEE, M.A., Vicar of St. Wendron, Cornwall, and lately Vice-Principal of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. 1868.

This work will supply materials for a History of Academical Life and Studies in the University of Oxford during the 13th, 14th, and 15th centuries.

51. CHRONICA MAGISTRI ROGERI DE HOVEDENE. Vols. I., II., III., and IV. Edited by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1868-1871.

This work has long been justly celebrated, but not thoroughly understood until Mr. Stubbs' edition. The earlier portion, extending from 732 to 1148, appears to be a copy of a compilation made in Northumbria about 1161, to which Hoveden added little. From 1148 to 1169—a very valuable portion of this work—the matter is derived from another source, to which Hoveden appears to have supplied little, and not always judiciously. From 1170 to 1192 is the portion which corresponds with the Chronicle known under the name of Benedict of Peterborough (see No. 49); but it is not a copy, being sometimes an abridgment, at others a paraphrase; occasionally the two works entirely agree; showing that both writers had access to the same materials, but dealt with them differently. From 1192 to 1201 may be said to be wholly Hoveden's work: it is extremely valuable, and an authority of the first importance.

52. WILLELMI MALMESBURIENSIS MONACHI DE GESTIS PONTIFICUM ANGLORUM LIBRI QUINQUE. Edited, from William of Malmesbury's Autograph MS., by N. E. S. A. HAMILTON, Esq., of the Department of Manuscripts, British Museum. 1870.

William of Malmesbury's "Gesta Pontificum" is the principal foundation of English Ecclesiastical Biography, down to the year 1122. The manuscript which has been followed in this Edition is supposed by Mr. Hamilton to be the author's autograph, containing his latest additions and amendments.

53. HISTORIC AND MUNICIPAL DOCUMENTS OF IRELAND, FROM THE ARCHIVES OF THE CITY OF DUBLIN, &c. 1172-1320. Edited by JOHN T. GILBERT, Esq., F.S.A., Secretary of the Public Record Office of Ireland. 1870.

A collection of original documents, elucidating mainly the history and condition of the municipal, middle, and trading classes under or in relation with the rule of England in Ireland,—a subject hitherto in almost total obscurity. Extending over the first hundred and fifty years of the Anglo-Norman settlement, the series includes charters, municipal laws and regulations, rolls of names of citizens and members of merchant-guilds, lists of commodities with their rates, correspondence, illustrations of relations between ecclesiastics and laity; together with many documents exhibiting the state of Ireland during the presence there of the Scots under Robert and Edward Bruce.

54. THE ANNALS OF LOCH CÉ. A CHRONICLE OF IRISH AFFAIRS, FROM 1014 TO 1590. Vols. I. and II. Edited, with a Translation, by WILLIAM MAUNSELL HENNESSY, Esq., M.R.I.A. 1871.

The original of this chronicle has passed under various names. The title of "Annals of Loch Cé" was given to it by Professor O'Curry, on the ground that it was transcribed for Brian Mac Dermot, an Irish chieftain, who resided on an island in Loch Cé, in the county of Roscommon. It adds much to the materials for the civil and ecclesiastical history of Ireland; and contains many curious references to English and foreign affairs, not noticed in any other chronicle.

55. MONUMENTA JURIDICA. THE BLACK BOOK OF THE ADMIRALTY, WITH APPENDICES. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by SIR TRAVERS TWISS, Q.C., D.C.L. 1871-1874.

This book contains the ancient ordinances and laws relating to the navy, and was probably compiled for the use of the Lord High Admiral of England. Selden calls it the "jewel of the Admiralty Records." Pryne ascribes to the Black Book the same authority in the Admiralty as the Black and Red Books have in the Court of Exchequer, and most English writers on maritime law recognize its importance.

56. MEMORIALS OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VI.:—OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THOMAS BEKYNTON, SECRETARY TO HENRY VI., AND BISHOP OF BATH AND WELLS. Edited, from a MS. in the Archiepiscopal Library at Lambeth, with an Appendix of Illustrative Documents, by the Rev. GEORGE WILLIAMS, B.D., Vicar of Ringwood, late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Vols. I. and II. 1872.

These curious volumes, which are of a very miscellaneous character, were, in all probability, compiled under the immediate direction of Bekynton, and commenced before he had attained to the dignity of the Episcopate. They contain many of the Bishop's own letters, and several written by him in the King's name. Besides these, there are letters sent to himself while he was the Royal Secretary, as well as others addressed to the King. This work will elucidate some obscure points in the history of the nation during the first half of the fifteenth century.

57. MATTHÆI PARISIENSIS, MONACHI SANCTI ALBANI, CHRONICA MAJORA. Vol. I. The Creation to A.D. 1066. Vol. II. A.D. 1067 to A.D. 1216. Edited by HENRY RICHARD Luard, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Registry of the University, and Vicar of Great St. Mary's, Cambridge. 1872-1874.

This work contains the "Chronica Majora" of Matthew Paris, one of the most valuable and frequently consulted of all the ancient English Chronicles. It is now published from its commencement, for the first time. The editions by Archbishop Parker, and William Wats, severally begin at the Norman Conquest.

58. MEMORIALE FRATRIS WALTERI DE COVENTRIA.—THE HISTORICAL COLLECTIONS OF WALTER OF COVENTRY. Vols. I. and II. Edited, from the MS. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1872-1873.

This work, now printed in full for the first time, has long been a desideratum by Historical Scholars. The first portion, however, is not of much importance, being only a compilation from earlier writers. The part relating to the first quarter of the thirteenth century is the most valuable and interesting.

59. THE ANGLO-LATIN SATIRICAL POETS AND EPIGRAMMATISTS OF THE TWELFTH CENTURY. Vols. I. and II. Now first collected and edited by THOMAS WRIGHT, Esq., M.A., Corresponding Member of the National Institute of France (Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres). 1872.

The Poems contained in these volumes have long been known and appreciated as the best satires of the age in which their authors flourished, and were deservedly popular during the 13th and 14th centuries.

60. MATERIALS FOR A HISTORY OF THE REIGN OF HENRY VII., FROM ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS PRESERVED IN THE PUBLIC RECORD OFFICE. Vol. I. Edited by the Rev. WILLIAM CAMPBELL, M.A., one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools. 1873.

This volume is valuable as illustrating the acts and proceedings of Henry VII. on ascending the throne, and shadows out the policy he afterwards adopted.

61. HISTORICAL PAPERS AND LETTERS FROM THE NORTHERN REGISTERS. Edited by JAMES RAINE, M.A., Canon of York, and Secretary of the Surtees Society. 1873.

The documents in this volume illustrate, for the most part, the general history of the north of England, particularly in its relation to Scotland.

62. REGISTRUM PALATINUM DUNELMENSE. THE REGISTER OF RICHARD DE KELLAWE, LORD PALATINE AND BISHOP OF DURHAM; 1311-1316. Vols. I., II., and III. Edited by Sir THOMAS DUFFUS HARDY, D.C.L., Deputy Keeper of the Public Records. 1873-1875.

Bishop Kellawe's Register contains the proceedings of his prelacy, both lay and ecclesiastical, and is the earliest Register of the Palatinate of Durham.

63. MEMORIALS OF SAINT DUNSTAN ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY. Edited, from various MSS., by WILLIAM STUBBS, M.A., Regius Professor of Modern History, and Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford. 1874.

This volume contains several lives of Archbishop Dunstan, one of the most celebrated Primates of Canterbury. They open various points of Historical and Literary interest, without which our knowledge of the period would be more incomplete than it is at present.

64. CHRONICON ANGLIÆ, AB ANNO DOMINI 1328 USQUE AD ANNUM 1388, AUCTORE MONACHO QUODAM SANCTI ALBANI. Edited by EDWARD MAUNDE THOMPSON, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, and Assistant-Keeper of the Manuscripts in the British Museum. 1874.

This chronicle gives a circumstantial history of the close of the reign of Edward III. which has hitherto been considered lost.

65. THÓMAS SAGA ERKIBYRKUPS. A LIFE OF ARCHBISHOP THOMAS BECKET, IN ICELANDIC. Vol. I. Edited, with English Translation, Notes, and Glossary, by M. EIRÍKR MAGNÚSSON, Sub-Librarian of the University Library, Cambridge. 1875.

This work is derived from the Life of Becket written by Benedict of Peterborough, and apparently supplies the missing portions in Benedict's biography.
